A QUARTET OF JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS

It was said that Mrs. Thomas Pierce, of the New York, Newport and Boston smart sets, when the divorce trouble came along and there was a question as to which parent should have control of their baby boy, replied with utmost nonchalance: "If it had been a horse, I could care for him perfectly."

There was always a cheer to go up when she mounted one of her pet horses, and with a "Now, boy!" and a cut of the whip she took any barrier that came her way. It was about that time, and when she got to be known familiarly among the smartest and rapidest hunting sets as "Mrs. Tom," that her husband began to learn that she could do without him. So it all ended in the divorce courts, when it seemed she cared more for horseflesh and the paddock than she did for home and husband and baby.

"It's a ripping evening for a drive," she answered when asked one day about her troubles, and off she went for a gallop across country. Since then "Mrs. Tom" has been notable mostly for her spectacular appearance, astride a horse, with a jaunty sombrero on the back of her head and her hunting boots and breeches.

Boston's Four Hundred, oddly enough, seems to be quite in the lead in immediate smart rapidity, and in Miss Eleanor Sears—"Bobby," "Tommy," or "Old Sport," as she is affectionately called by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, young Harold Vanderbilt or whoever happens to be her best chum for the moment—there is presented one of the most amazing examples possible to contemplate in smart rapidity. Any one day in her life is enough to take one's breath away. She is up at 5, takes an icy plunge, plays tennis four hours at a stretch, and, if she happens to feel like it, gets over forty-odd holes of golf, takes a motor spin, sails a catboat in the stiffest breeze, drives a four-in-hand or jumps on a horse and rides bareback—just as it takes her fancy.

At Aiken, once upon a time, she was among the gayest spirits, when she suddenly burst out, "Riding side-saddle is all beastly tommyrot!" and led other older women to follow her, on a dare—just for fun. When she led Harold Vanderbilt the swim of his life at Beverly Beach she remarked, "We had a bully good swim, but there was a Hades of a tow, and I was out of form—just rotten, you know."

Miss Jessie G. Sherman, while not quite so lively, perhaps, as her chum, is another one of America's high-hearted, laughter-loving girls, who prefers horses and out-of-door sports to the conventions, and would have positively shocked her sweet grandmamma, if she could possibly have seen her taking a fence as she is snapshotted in the picture before your eyes.

"Society? Who cares for society?" said Miss Katharine Roosevelt, the cousin of the President. Conventional humdrums bored her. She liked to do as she pleased. The home in Beacon street irked her. "Katharine loathes society," explained Mrs. T. J. Bowlker, her mother. "She is far happier hunting the fox and managing her farm than attending teas and afternoon balls."

Miss Edith Harlan Bird, the daughter of Charles B. Bird, of this same most aristocratic street in America, owns her own stable in Walpole, and belongs to the very smart and exclusive hunting set, who wear white hunting togs—just to be a little more distinctive in smart rapidity than any other smart set.

Miss Edith Deacon, of Newport, New York and almost everywhere in Vanity Fair, may be cited as a certain typical example of the smartest rapidity among young American society girls. When "Fighting Bob" Evans's vessels, in 1906, rode peacefully at anchor off Newport, her grandmother, Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin, presented the Admiral with an amulet, charmed against mishaps. "You must be our mascot of the fleet," said the gallant naval officer, turning to Miss Edith. "That's easy enough," she replied with utmost naive sprightliness. "I understand men pretty well."

It seems to have been the Alfred Vanderbilt "horsey" set that was the beginning of the disturbance between Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dietrich after she had come out of the South into the swifter life in New York and provoked such a famous scandal. Mrs. William L. Hirst, of Philadelphia, who was Miss Marion Holloway, and Mrs. W. C. Bain, who was Miss Belle Beach, are women who really love horses and all the attendant excitation, and yet seem to manage to preserve the dignity of an admirable sport when properly directed.

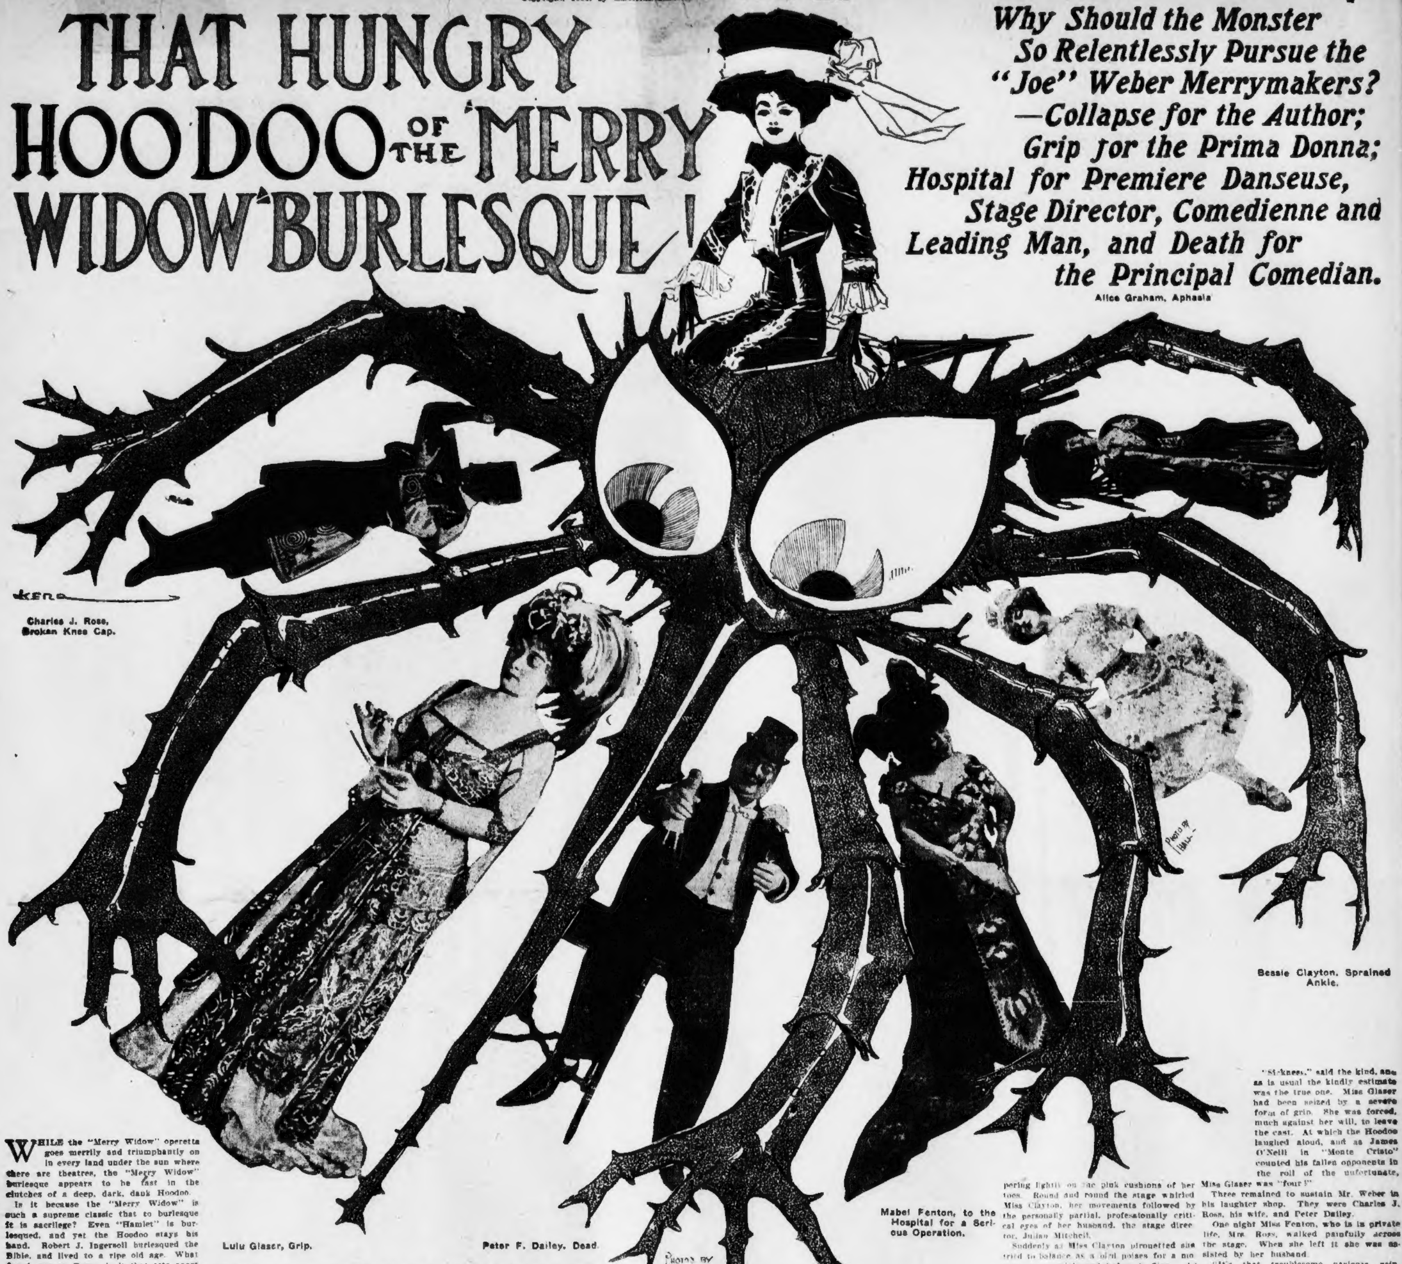
THAT HUNGRY HOODOO OF THE "MERRY WIDOW" BURLESQUE!

Why Should the Monster So Relentlessly Pursue the "Joe" Weber Merrymakers? —Collapse for the Author; Grip for the Prima Donna; Hospital for Premiere Danseuse, Stage Director, Comedienne and Leading Man, and Death for the Principal Comedian.



Alice Graham, Aphasia

Charles J. Ross, Broken Knee Cap.

Lulu Glaser, Grip.

Peter F. Dailey, Dead.

Mabel Fenton, to the Hospital for a Serious Operation.

Bessie Clayton, Sprained Ankle.

WHILE the "Merry Widow" operetta goes merrily and triumphantly on in every land under the sun where there are theatres, the "Merry Widow" burlesque appears to be fast in the clutches of a deep, dark, dank Hoodoo.

Is it because the "Merry Widow" is such a supreme classic that to burlesque it is sacrilege? Even "Hamlet" is burlesqued, and yet the Hoodoo stays his hand. Robert J. Ingersoll burlesqued the Bible, and lived to a ripe old age. What dread, unseen Power is it that sets apart the "Merry Widow," holding it inviolable by burlesquers?

Not to be blasphemous, the Seven Great Plagues of Egypt with which the Lord of Israel scourged King Pharaoh disturbed that iniquitous monarch little more than the "Merry Widow" burlesque Hoodoo has disturbed Joseph Weber and his players. Here are some of the details, chronologically arranged:

Edgar Smith, author of the burlesque, breaks down with his work half finished.

Julian Mitchell, stage director, laid low by appendicitis.

Bessie Clayton, premiere danseuse, sprains her ankle.

Lulu Glaser, prima donna, down with the grip.

Mabel Fenton, comedienne, in the hospital for a dangerous operation—varicose vein.

Charles J. Ross, leading man, in the same hospital with a broken kneecap.

Peter F. Dailey, principal comedian, ill with pneumonia and dead after three days.

Maud Elton, thrown from her horse and painfully injured.

Alice Graham, sudden attack of aphasia—unable to remember her lines.

Beth Moore, threatened blood poisoning from dressmaker's needle.

Several nervous young women out of the cast—resigned to escape the Hoodoo.

Until "Charlie" Ross, leaving the theatre after the last performance but one of the New York run, fell on a stone stair and broke his kneecap square across, the hand of the Hoodoo had not been recognized.

"Pete" Dailey, who picked him up, and other members of the company who gathered around awaiting the arrival of an ambulance and the family doctor, were suddenly pale and apprehensive.

When her injured husband was brought at 1 o'clock in the morning to the same hospital, where she lay slowly recovering from her operation, Mabel Fenton nearly collapsed. The clear-headed and sensible young actress did not believe in hoodoos, but, plainly, there was something "unlucky about the 'Merry Widow' burlesque." Less than a week later "Charlie" Ross said to a friend who had called on him at the hospital:

"All those accidents and injuries to members of the company gave me a sort of feeling that there was worse to come. The night of my accident was the last but one of the New York engagement. We were booked direct to Chicago. Many of us were averse to going on tour just then. I felt that it was a mistake, and so did Peter Dailey. I didn't want to go, and all that evening I had a feeling that I was not going.

"Well, here I am in the hospital, unable to get on my legs for weeks to come. And from Chicago there's news of more trouble. I had a letter from Peter Dailey yesterday. When he wrote he was ill—threatened with pneumonia. Immediately I recalled how Peter was uneasy about that Chicago trip——"

The interruption was a messenger boy with a telegram addressed to Charles J. Ross. He opened the envelope with shaking hands, read the message, and fell back on his pillow:

"Pardon me—I can't say anything more just now. Peter Dailey died this morning."

There is reason other than the morbid fancy of a sick man to believe that a malign fate is pursuing the company of clever merrymakers who are nightly making fun of the Viennese opera that has captured American fancy. While playing at the Colonial Theatre, in Chicago, the comedians and chorus look apprehensively at each other and ask:

"Who next?"

"I wish we had gone on making different productions," said one of the principals of the company. "The Hoodoo got after us at the beginning of the season. None of the travesties pleased the public and we kept on changing the bill. It kept us working hard, but daily rehearsals and a performance every night and two performances on Saturday are not as bad as this. When we got the 'Merry Widow' burlesque the Hoodoo got mad, and left off 'queering' the production, and did what is a lot worse—'queered' the individual members."

That the Hoodoo was astir was first shown during the writing of the burlesque. Edgar Smith, who has written the merry nonsense for the little music hall at the corner of Broadway and Twenty-ninth street since it housed the Weber-Fields company, fell ill and was unable to finish his work.

"You must go away and rest," said that autocrat, the family physician.

"But I can't. I am writing a new piece. It must be put on in two weeks."

"You must go away and rest," repeated the autocrat inexorably.

So it befell that the initial step of the Hoodoo was successful. Another finished the libretto of the "Merry Widow" burlesque.

While Edgar Smith, chafing quite as much as he rested, because it was anguish to him, the anguish of a fixed habit broken, to know that the old company of mirth-brewers was rehearsing without him, Peter Dailey, Charles J. Ross, Mr. Ross's wife, Mabel Fenton; Lulu Glaser and Bessie Clayton, under Julian Mitchell's direction, went forward with the rehearsals.

The Hoodoo, having seen the unhappy librettist, Mr. Smith, miserably banished to the country, came back to town, perched in the wings and reflected. His eye fell upon pretty, lissome Bessie Clayton, capering lightly on the pink cushions of her toes. Round and round the stage whirled Miss Clayton, her movements followed by the personally partial, professionally critical eyes of her husband, the stage director, Julian Mitchell.

Suddenly as Miss Clayton pirouetted she tried to balance as a bird poises for a moment on a twig's end before it flies. As she stood there lightly, gracefully, looking as a bird in human guise, her heels awkwardly struck the floor. She swayed and paled. Her husband caught her as she was falling.

"The most terrible pain," she moaned. "I think I've sprained my ankle." And she fainted.

For months Miss Clayton was out of the cast. It was a severe blow to the management, for Miss Clayton is one of the best of American dancers. But it was a severer blow to Miss Clayton. With her little daughter Priscilla for company she set about the task of recuperating, as rebelliously as, in his country retreat, Mr. Smith was doing.

The Hoodoo, smiling from his perch among the drops, laughed maliciously.

"Guess I'll finish off that Mitchell family," he chuckled.

And the next day doughty Mr. Mitchell, who scoffs at illness as a fiction of the imagination, was scowling up into the face of a physician, who said:

"You have appendicitis."

"Three weeks, at least, in bed," was the sentence of the Hoodoo.

And Julian Mitchell, not patiently, but profanely, served his term. His absence retarded rehearsals. It rendered the usually amiable Jospeh Weber a fiend of anxiety and irascibility.

But the four funmakers went on with their rehearsals, embroidering their parts with merry original quips, trying as best they could to supplement the unfinished efforts of the exiled Mr. Smith. And despite all the hindrances he had interposed, the Hoodoo was for a time vanquished. He retreated before he was temporarily swept away upon the wave of a big popular success.

Prosperity unfolded its golden wings atop the music hall and the Hoodoo was forgotten. But only for a week. One night Lulu Glaser's ringing laugh rang less clearly than usual. She drooped through rather than played her part.

"Sulks," said the ill-natured.

"Sickness," said the kind, and as is usual the kindly estimate was the true one. Miss Glaser had been seized by a severe form of grip. She was forced, much against her will, to leave the cast. At which the Hoodoo laughed aloud, and as James O'Neill in "Monte Cristo" counted his fallen opponents in the roll of the unfortunate, Miss Glaser was "four!"

Three remained to sustain Mr. Weber in his laughter shop. They were Charles J. Ross, his wife, and Peter Dailey.

One night Miss Fenton, who is in private life, Mrs. Ross, walked painfully across the stage. When she left it she was assisted by her husband.

"It's that troublesome varicose vein, Charlie," she sighed, and the next day the evening papers announced:

"Miss Fenton is out of the cast of that remarkably successful burlesque, 'The Merry Widow.'"

To the hospital for an operation and for long weeks of recuperation went Miss Fenton, while the malicious spirit up among the drops chortled.

When, soon afterward, "the handsomest man on the stage" tripped and broke his knee cap the Hoodoo's delight reached the climax of glee. To the hospital in New York, where his wife was counting the long days of convalescence, he drove in the democratic vehicle, more democratic than a taxicab or even a quarter cab—the ambulance.

Lying there chafing as a strong man chafes at restraint, especially the pusillanimous restraint of illness, Mr. Ross received the final blow—that telegram which made him weep as strong men weep only once or twice in a lifetime

"Pete died to-day of pneumonia."

The dramatic profession sincerely mourned Pete Dailey's death. It crowded the streets at his funeral. When the members of one order walked out of the house in dudgeon because the members of another order to which he belonged insisted upon conducting the funeral services, the players looked awestricken into each other's faces.

"The Hoodoo has followed poor Pete even to the grave," they said.

The lesser members of the company have not escaped the strange chain of untoward events. Alice Graham, a chorus girl, was discharged because her humble part in the performance she could not remember. She is being treated now for aphasia. Maud Elton was thrown from a horse in the park. Beth Moore, while having a new gown tried on, was hurt by a careless dressmaker's needle. Blood poisoning threatens.

How many young women of the chorus have had to be replaced because of their retreat before the dire Hoodoo's [illegible] the management declines to state.

If You Want to Be Healthy Get a Spade and Dig.

IT IS no news to most people that to delve in the fresh upturned soil of the fields and to drink in its odors is probably the most healthful occupation a man can follow.

It must be known to many that a better antidote against consumption cannot be recommended. The earth is full of health-giving gases, which help very materially towards staying the horrible ravages of the deadly disease.

But it is not only as a cure for consumption that digging is worthy of the reader's attention. As an exercise it is second to none. It is a certain cure for countless petty ailments, such as drowsiness, dizziness, headache, constipation, indigestion, and what not, which are so often the result of your not indulging in a sufficiently vigorous exercise.

Again, digging brings into play practically every muscle in the body, from even the minutest in the feet to the most insignificant in the back, chest and stomach.

A few years ago some dozen pretty maids and matrons of a certain snug little North Country village in England, inspired by the remarks of a lecturer on the subject, formed themselves into what it pleased them to call "The Society of Lady Diggers."

They obtained permission to dig on a small field, and solemnly promised one another to indulge in the invigorating exercise on three afternoons a week. They bought new four-pronged forks at one dollar each and hobnail boots at a dollar and a half the pair, cut their old skirts short, abandoned the much-abused corset, threw their powder puffs into the dustbin, gave their rouge and paint to their ladies' maids, and set to work with an earnestness that literally started the whole countryside talking.

For a time all went as smoothly and as happily as the proverbial marriage bell. One unfortunate afternoon, however, one of the fair toilers failed to make her appearance, and sent her gardener in her place. This was the beginning of the end of the only digging club ever known or heard of. Yet, incredible as it may sound, once having tasted the joys of turning over the sweet brown soil, but two or three of those merry spinsters and wives have been able to wholly give up the delightful exercise.

In the privacy of their gardens, clad in the hobnailed boots which were purchased with so much enthusiasm, and incidentally amid so much excitement, three years ago, and which only the blacking brush has ever brightened, you may often see them digging with a grimness that seldom fails to surprise, side by side with the gardener.

"Once take seriously to digging," said one of these fair diggers, "and the chances are that you will remain an ardent devotee of the spade till the end of your life. And this," she went on, "is nothing to wonder at, for is not digging a natural exercise? You know what I mean.

"By birth we are all tillers of the soil. Besides, like most of Nature's creations, digging does one so much good; it stimulates the whole body, including the brain. In these days, however, of false pride and make-believe, it requires a stout heart to own to all this. I do not mean to say that I have a stout heart. I do not count that is to say, in the social world."

Again, after a pause of a few moments, she resumed: "I do not profess to know more than the average woman about the many petty, yet annoying complaints from which we women are continually suffering, but I do know this, that digging is a positive and a pleasant remedy for most of them."

WHAT! ARE BODY DANCES SPOILING THE COLLEGE GIRL'S FIGURE?

While Aesthetic Mammas of the Old School Are Horrified at their Daughters' Full Waists and Large Limbs, Dr. Sargent Says That Body Dances and Big Muscles Are Most Desirable.

COLLEGE GIRL IN A GREEK DANCE.

AT Wellesley lately some of the very prim and aesthetic Boston mammas of the college girls were horrified to find that their daughters were developing figures like Greek statues. Their waists were large and full and almost as straight up and down as their athletic brothers at Harvard.

Their arms and legs had become large and muscular and quite at variance with the accepted type of the slender, will o' the wisp college girl. In fact, the new figure of the college girl has become so mannish that it quite defies all the rules of fashion, and the mothers of the returning girl graduates are wondering how they will manage to fit their daughters into conventional fashionable clothes for the Summer season.

The alarm has spread from Wellesley to Smith, Vassar and many other girls' schools and colleges, where the same conditions are found to exist.

This "new figure" is attributed largely to the "body" dances now generally practised at all the girls' colleges.

While consternation is prevailing among the mothers at the sight of their girls developing into modern Amazons or Dianas, a very eminent authority, Prof. Dudley A. Sargent, director of the Hemenway Gymnasium, at Harvard University, takes an entirely different view of the situation.

He says that it is eminently proper that girls should indulge in these dances and develop large muscles around the waist and on all their limbs.

Some years ago Prof. Sargent began to make measurements of the school and college girl of America in twenty different institutions. As a result of this he had a statue made to represent a composite of the real college girl of that period. He found that she had a hollow back, flat chest, drooping head and pinched, cramped waist.

Prof. Sargent proceeded to point out how these defects could be remedied by proper breathing, exercising the arms and chest to develop them to the fullest, by Greek dances and other exercises. He then said:

"I hope in a very short time to bring about more satisfactory results with regard to the female figure."

How well Prof. Sargent's agitation for physical culture for girls has succeeded is shown by the fact that now, within a few years, the college girl's figure has been completely transformed, and she now approaches very closely to the ancient Greek ideal of beauty. A conspicuous example of the new type of college girl is Mrs. George Caine, formerly Edyth Gordon Walker, whose splendid figure was developed by dancing exercises at Wellesley College.

COLLEGE GIRL GRADUATES WITH LARGE WAISTS, THE RESULT OF ATHLETIC EXERCISES.

Why Girls Should Dance and Cultivate Muscles.

BY PROFESSOR DUDLEY A. SARGENT, DIRECTOR OF THE HEMENWAY GYMNASIUM, HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

(From "Health, Strength and Power"—Copyright, by H. M. Caldwell Co.)

DANCING every girl should indulge in, not necessarily the society dancing that always requires a partner, but that free and joyous expression of the emotions through the rhythmic and graceful movements of the body and limbs which delight both the performer and the observer.

The self-possession and the mental and physical poise that come from this kind of dancing, which is taught in most gymnasiums (and schools and colleges for girls), is worth everything.

The most important exercises for girls are those that develop the muscles about the waist and abdomen, not alone because great muscular power in this region is required of women, but because of the effect which exercise of these parts has upon both stomachic and intestinal digestion.

Strangely enough, it is the waist and abdominal region that women have rendered most inert through the conventional mode of dressing. In order to fortify themselves against the evil consequences of this silly fashion of constricting the waist, waist and abdominal exercises in young girls should receive supreme attention.

The best exercises for developing this region of the body are the free exercises that may be practised in the gymnasium or in one's room night and morning, when free from the restrictions of ordinary clothing.

Rowing is a most admirable exercise for the development of the muscles of the abdomen, waist and back, as well as those of the arms, shoulders and legs, if the sliding seat is used.

Swimming is perhaps one of the best exercises for girls, because nearly all the muscles of the body are brought into a state of gentle activity.

College Girl in Dancing Costume.

Hanging from Bar to Strengthen the Arms.

The head is thrown back, the chest forward and every stroke of the arms tends to increase the chest expansion. So many muscles also are brought into action that the lungs and heart are greatly stimulated, and all parts of the body share this increase of the respiration and circulation. Moreover, swimming is an exercise that all girls should practise as a precautionary measure, in case of accident on the water, and it is one of the sports in which women excel.

Fencing is very much to be recommended on the same grounds. Then the Indian clubs, which give so much grace and finish to the movements of the hands and arms, are valuable agents for training one's powers of coordination.

Juggling with the bounding balls which so delighted the maidens of ancient Greece, and to which the Japanese attribute much of their manual dexterity, is an admirable exercise for training both eye and hand to accuracy and alertness.

Wands, dumbbells and chestweights, those indispensable agents of the well-equipped gymnasium, are always serviceable and accessible for development purposes, and so are the swings, ladders, ropes, bars and much of the so-called heavy apparatus. Learning how to climb a ladder, descend a rope or swing from a bar are simply lessons in the art of handling the weight of one's body by the arms which every healthy girl should be able to do. Every girl should learn to ride a bicycle, and, where the opportunity presents itself, she should learn to ride horseback also.

Physical accomplishments bring their mental as well as physical equivalents and should be considered part of the girl's mental education.

Two-thirds of the body weight consists of bones and muscles, and these parts can only be kept in condition by performing the functions for which they were created. In performing these functions they not only improve the quality and tone of bones and muscles, but they improve the health and strength of the entire system, including brain, nerves, heart, lungs and pelvic organs, through the effect produced upon the respiration, circulation and digestion.

The possession of large muscle areas into which the blood may be drained at times, to relieve blood pressure in the brain or pelvis, is a matter of the greatest importance, and often constitutes the difference between a life of enjoyment and one of periodic misery.

Exercises which require a considerable number of conscious contractions of the muscles made rhythmically (as in dancing), and followed by more or less complete relaxation, seem to contribute most to their general nutrition. Many women are often deterred from making conscious muscular efforts through fear of acquiring "large, knotty muscles." There need be little fear of this, as all the muscles that most women are likely to obtain are pretty sure to be covered with more or less adipose tissue.

Golf is especially advantageous to woman, not only because it takes her out into the open country, but because the game calls into particular action the muscles of the chest and the front and side walls of the waist and abdomen. If the waist is large and fleshy this game tends to reduce it. If, on the other hand, the waist is narrow and constricted, golf tends to broaden it. It is a splendid antidote for the corset, as it tends to develop the abdominal muscles which the corset makes inert.

For this reason golf is a better game physically for women than for men, as these muscles are more important vitally to the former than to the latter.

These are the muscles upon which the Greeks laid so much stress in their male and female statues, and for the development of which they prescribed so many exercises.

Are Actresses Home-Loving People?

RECENTLY in this newspaper were published expressions of several actresses well known and liked by American play-goers on the subject of whether or not members of their profession should marry. Apropos of that symposium Miss Amelia Summerville has contributed the following interesting comment:

To the Editor: In my opinion Miss May Irwin came nearer the truth than any of the other writers for the symposium in saying that actresses are inclined to be a home-loving people. I also share Miss Virginia Harned's views about married people not separating.

I consider separation fatal. The actress must possess all womanly characteristics to make her successful in her vocation. For myself I can say that love of home and my children has dominated me always, and I have remained on the stage because I have had to be the bread winner during both my terms in matrimony.

After reading Mr. Frederick Davidson's statement: "All actresses are failures as wives," I cannot see if I agreed with him (which I do not) what reputable life would be open to an actress.

Actresses, being women of temperament, naturally require sympathy, affection, love; in fact, the things that go toward filling a woman's life.

Suppose the man comes along who supplies these requisites. If she may not marry, what then? The actress is as anxious to keep her name untarnished and her life clean as are other women in other walks of life. As for myself, the right man has not come along. When he does I am ready to give up my theatrical career and become domesticated for the rest of my days. AMELIA SUMMERVILLE.

Mrs. Bristow Draper.

WHAT will be the outcome of young Bristow Draper's struggle to earn a living and win the approval of his father, Lieutenant Governor Eben S. Draper, of Massachusetts?

Will he and his chorus-girl bride finally be welcomed back to his father's estate at Hopedale, Mass., and given charge of the great cotton mills, with a mansion to live in?

Or will he have to follow the slow plodding path of the poor wage earner for years to come till he can work his way upward on his own merits?

These are the questions that the people of the prim and circumspect little city of Burlington, Vt., are turning over in their minds as they watch young Bristow Draper go back and forth each day from his cottage to the cotton mill.

He is working ten hours a day, and receives $7.50 a week, as a common spinner.

This is the penalty that Bristow Draper is paying for marrying the chorus girl, Queenie Sanford, in New York, a year ago, in defiance of his father's wishes.

Boston society has hardly recovered yet from the shock received when it was learned that one of its own favorite daughters, Alice Marjorie Ray, an heiress to millions, once betrothed to the Lieutenant-Governor's son, had been put aside—and for a chorus girl.

Bristow Draper had been regarded as one of the most desirable matrimonial catches in New England. Beside his father's millions and the prestige of the Draper name for generations, his maternal ancestry was equally famous.

His mother was a daughter of General Benjamin H. Bristow, of New York, who was Secretary of the Treasury under Grant and Kentucky's candidate for the Presidency in 1876.

But in spite of all this Bristow Draper chose for his bride an actress, born and brought up in New York's East Side tenement district.

Instead of being married in the beautiful Draper Memorial Church at Hopedale, as his parents and society friends had fondly hoped, to a girl in their own set, Bristow Draper had had the temerity to choose a wife from stageland and have a clandestine marriage at the Catholic parish house of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York.

All of which brought upon the mill owner's son a social ostracism in his own home quite as withering as his father's banishment from the paternal roof.

But in spite of these calamities Bristow Draper has never by word or sign shown that he regretted marrying the girl that he loved.

"I believe in a man doing as his judgment tells him—in marrying the girl he loves, and in making his own way in the world."

After his marriage, in March, 1907, Draper and his bride went to Seattle, on the Pacific Coast, where they lived for a time. A few months ago they returned East and Bristow Draper took a position as a spinner in a big cottin mill in Burlington.

The home of the young couple is a two-story cottage in a retired part of the town. Two months ago a son was born. And now it seems as if there were no happier pair in all the little city on Lake Champlain.

Every morning, as the young spinner starts for his work at six o'clock, he sets his dinner-pail down on the porch, raises his wife's slender hand to his lips, kisses the crowing babe in her arms and then seals anew his love with a kiss upon her lips.

Trudging home at half-past six in the evening, after the long, weary day of wage slavery in a New England mill town, the young husband's brow is brightened by the sight of his young wife, with the baby in her arms, waiting his arrival upon the cottage porch.

A singular circumstance has occurred within the last fortnight, revealing the New England father in as stern a role as the Roman parent.

While his own son was toiling ten hours a day in the mill, Eben S. Draper, Acting Governor of Massachusetts, refused to sanction a proposed law reducing the working time for certain classes of operatives to fifty-four hours a week, or nine hours a day. His reason was that the corporate milling interests of the State would suffer from such a reduction of working hours.

That Bristow Draper expects no immediate relenting from his stern parent is apparent from this statement, made recently:

"I hope to learn the cotton manufacturing business from the lowest rounds. At present I am starting at the bottom, just as any laborer at $1,25 a day might do. I am in charge of no one. That is, I hold the same position as any ordinary spinner. I am working ten hours a day and am learning the rudiments of the industry. And in doing this," he added, "I am far happier than if I were subsisting on my father's wealth."

To a friend who visited him lately he confided that he is the happiest in his present position that he has ever been, and that if he had known the fulness of life which comes from marriage with a beloved wife, he would have married two years before, in spite of the protests of any one.

His bride, known to theatregoers as Queenie Sanford, who has made Bristow Draper's life happier in a cottage than he could be in a palace without her, is a brunette of a rare type. Her chief magnetic attraction is in her eyes, of a deep Oriental black. Her coloring is almost waxen, the pink and white of her face giving her an exquisite charm.

From all of her former associates of the stage comes the tribute, "Queenie was the most popular girl in the company. She was always cheerful, always hid her own troubles and sympathized with those of the rest of us. She always met everything with a good-natured laugh."

Mrs. Bristow Draper is a New York girl. She was born on the island of Manhattan. Her father was a clerk and bookkeeper. Her mother was an economical woman who taught frugality of taste combined with refinement to her children. There were four children, a son and daughter older than Queenie and one younger daughter. The son followed his father in his choice of an occupation. The older sister became a stenographer. The family lived in one of the neater, better tenements in Ninetieth street, on the East Side.

When she was sixteen Queenie Sanford went on the stage. It was not because she was stage struck. In fact, she disliked the boards and their associations. She did it because she believed that given some talent for the stage its rewards are greater than those of any other profession open to women.

She made her debut in the chorus of "The Belle of New York." Subsequently she appered with Edna May in "The School Girl" and "The Catch of the Season." For a time she was with "The Girl from Kay's," and her last engagement was with "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer."

She was a good dancer but had no singing voice, which was a deterrent in the career she had adopted of musical comedy. She was drawn from the chorus ranks to succeed Flossie Hope as the tough messenger boy in "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer." She also understudied Miss Georgia Caine in that play, and when Miss Caine was ill in Chicago Miss Sanford acceptably played the role for a week.

It was while she was playing in "The Catch of the Season," in Boston, that she met Mr. Draper. He fell in love with her at first sight. They soon became engaged, but their engagement was at first secret because the young couple hoped for the consent of the young man's father.

Then the engagement was apparently broken while Bristow Draper paid attentions to a society girl, Marjorie Ray.

A lovers' tiff and an estrangement in this social alliance came about, and then Bristow Draper went back to his first love and married her forthwith.

This was while Miss Sanford was playing in "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer" at Wallack's Theatre in New York, fifteen months ago.

Now gossips in Boston are wondering whether, after all the stern Lieutenant-Governor will not relent in due time, when it seems that the wayward son has had sufficient punishment, and the haughty Draper family receive the young man and his pretty bride into their hearts and into their social world.

In the meantime that part of Burlington which constitutes itself as "society" is wondering upon what footing to receive the ex-chorus girl bride and her wage-working husband. There is no precedent in the village annals to guide their judgment. But the young couple that are the object of so much attention are so absorbed in their own happiness and the new found joy of their baby boy that they are making no advances to be received anywhere.

If Miss Elkins Should be Queen-

This Most Interesting Americ
Splendid Italian Palaces, Fille

How Miss Elkins Will Look in Her Crown and Royal Robes as Queen of Italy.

What it Means to Her.

THE marriage of Miss Katherine Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi is incomparably more important from a worldly point of view than any previous alliance between an American girl and a titled European.

Miss Elkins will be absolutely the first American girl to marry a royal prince, for that is what the Duke really is. Americans have a habit of regarding all titled foreigners as in the same class. This is a great mistake, since there is obviously an enormous difference between a man who may inherit the throne and one who is merely a member of the nobility, however high. Americans also are apt to forget that French titles have no legal status, since France is quite as much a republic as the United States, but the holders of them may be eminent socially or wealthy.

Neither the Duchess of Marlborough nor the Duchess of Roxburghe, nor the Princess Rospigliosi, nor any of the other American girls who have married titles possesses anything like the rank that will belong to Her Royal Highness the Duchess of the Abruzzi. According to the strict rules of royal etiquette the Duchess of Marlborough would not have the right to sit down at the same table with the Duchess of the Abruzzi. If any child of the former Duchess planned to marry a member of a reigning family it would be regarded as just as much contrary to royal usage as is the forthcoming marriage of Miss Elkins. In other words, between royalty and nobility there is a great gulf fixed.

One of the most interesting facts about this marriage is that the Duke of the Abruzzi may become King of Italy some day. In that case we shall have the extraordinary spectacle of an American girl of plain American ancestry occupying a throne and wearing a royal crown.

In view of this possibility it becomes important to estimate as closely as possible what the Duke's chances are. They are not so remote as they may at first sight appear. There are at present just five lives between the Duke and the throne. They are the lives of the King's only son, of the Duke's oldest brother, the Duke of Aosta, and his two sons, and of the next brother, the Count of Turin, who is unmarried. The Duke of the Abruzzi, it may here be recalled, is the third son of the late Duke of Aosta, who was the brother next in age of the late King Humbert of Italy.

The Duke of the Abruzzi's chance of inheriting the throne is greater than was that of Queen Victoria, as she was the daughter of a fourth son of King George IV. The three older brothers and all their children had prior claims to her.

The Duke's prospects are rendered more favorable by the fact that his cousin, the King, is a man of very delicate health. Although he has chosen a wife of fine physique it does not seem probable that his only son will prove very robust. The next in succession is the Duke of Aosta, and his two children give indications of being delicate. The Count of Turin, the second brother, has apparently made up his mind not to marry.

In case the Duke of the Abruzzi should succeed to the throne he would inherit practically all the public and personal property of the royal family. His American wife would, of course, share in this vast collection of property and art treasures. She would become the mistress of about thirty splendid palaces, filled with the most precious works of the Italian old masters, sculpture of all ages, priceless tapestries and the most beautiful and valuable furniture in existence. No royal family in Europe possesses so many palaces as that of Italy.

Chief among these palaces is the Quirinal at Rome, which stands on the historic hill named after Quirinus, one of the mythical founders of Rome. It was the Summer palace of the Popes until 1870, when it was taken as the chief residence of the new King of Italy. There is a splendid garden, commanding a grand view of the city and the dome of St. Peter's.

The great throne room is the principal apartment in the palace. It is here that Miss Elkins, if she becomes Queen, will receive the homage of the princes and princesses, ambassadors and dignitaries of Italy and the rest of Europe. On the walls are beautiful frescoes by Lanfranco and Saraceni, and also many portraits of princes and princesses. This is one of a long series of rooms opening out of another. In some of them are some very interesting ancient mosaics from Hadrian's villa.

Whether this palace ever becomes the property of the Duke or not, it is understood that he and his bride will occupy a portion of it at once. This will be their Roman residence. One wing of the palace is now being made ready for occupancy.

One of the grandest palaces in the possession of the royal family is the Pitti at Florence. It contains one of the three greatest collections of pictures in Italy. Among them are fifteen Raphaels, including "The Madonna della Sedia;" six Titians, three Botticellis and hundreds of other old masters. The palace stands in the Boboli Gardens, which are the most famous in Italy. The Duke's brother, the Count of Turin, is at present the principal occupant of the palace, but being a bachelor he will cheerfully yield the state apartments to the new Duchess.

The royal palace at Turin was an ancestral possession of the house of Savoy before it acquired the throne of Italy. Here is the largest collection of old armor in Europe.

The royal Summer palace at Monza is one of the loveliest places in Europe. It is situated in a beautiful and healthy region in northern Italy.

If Miss Elkins should succeed to the throne she would enjoy the use of the wonderful jewels of the present Queen and of the Dowager Queen Margherita. The latter is famed as the possessor of the finest collection of emeralds in the world.

THE MAN--
The Duke of the Abruzzi.

STRONGLY as the plain American people are prejudiced against international marriages they can find no serious objection to the Duke of the Abruzzi.

He is the most distinguished and successful explorer in the world. He is a man of great scientific and scholarly attainments; he is an interesting writer; he is a born leader of men; he is a man of great physical strength; he is possessed of undaunted courage and remarkable powers of endurance; his life is a model of good conduct and chivalrous behavior, and he is practically a total abstainer.

The Duke is the third son of the late Prince Amedeo, Duke of Aosta, younger brother of King Humbert of Italy. His father was for four years King of Spain. The Duke is thirty-five years old and holds the rank of Rear Admiral in the Italian navy, a duty which he discharges very efficiently when not on leave of absence for purposes of exploration or courtship.

The Duke is five feet eight inches high and very powerfully and compactly built. He is quite good looking, but his face is chiefly remarkable for its long, powerful, prominent jaw. This is an indication of a fighting temperament.

It is interesting to recall that the house of Savoy, to which the Duke belongs, has the greatest fighting record of any family in the world. For about a thousand years they were fighting without cessation. Savoy was a little patch of land situated between France on one hand and Italy on the other, with Germany not far away. Usually they were fighting with one or more of their neighbors. Sometimes they were turned out of their country altogether, but they never ceased to fight. The Duke is an incarnation of the combative and aggressive instincts of his valorous and chivalric ancestors.

Among the many achievements of the Duke a few will be sufficient to prove his qualities. He reached the farthest north in the search for the North Pole. He was the first man to ascend to the summit of Mount St. Elias, the highest mountain in Alaska. He was the first to ascend the Ruwenzori range, called also the Mountains of the Moon, in Central Africa.

Prince Luigi, of Savoy, showed his strength and aptitude for feats of courage and daring from his early boyhood. He entered the Italian navy at the customary age, that is, as a child, and became a competent naval officer and sailor. He spent his holidays climbing the Alps, which, of course, are within easy reach of Italy, and thus he acquired skill as a mountain climber and familiarity with ice and snow. He was very young when he ascended two hitherto unexplored peaks of Mont Blanc, known as "Les Dames Anglaises," or "The English Ladies," on account of their inaccessibility.

The first feat that called the world's attention to the serious qualities of the Duke as an explorer was performed on American soil. This was his ascent of Mount St. Elias, the highest mountain of the Alaskan range, in 1897. He was the first man to ascend to the highest peak of the mountain, which he measured as 18,100 feet in height. The ascent occupied thirty days. During the expedition he discovered a great new glacier and two new peaks. In his report describing the ascent the Duke says:

"At exactly five minutes before 12 o'clock, noon, we stood on the highest point of great St. Elias, the first men to stand there, the first men to look through the clear air over a view of rugged mountain scenery grander than any Alpine prospect.

"For an hour we remained upon this summit. The cold was not very excessive. The thermometer showed the temperature only 20 degrees below freezing point. Our mercurial barometer showed the height to be 18,100 feet. One hour upon the summit was occupied in planting a flagstaff, from which the flag of Italy was floated to the arctic breeze.

"Then the flags of the United States and Italy were cached on the mountain top, and we began the descent."

Every member of the expedition testified that the Duke was the first man to meet any danger that pre-

… of the Ruwenzori range is very gradual … of great length. The most peculiar … mountains is the vegetation on the …hich is remarkably thick and of extraordinary character. An English explorer, Mr. Wollaston, who attempted the ascent, wrote:

"It is beautiful and terrible and delightful, and yet horrible. Through all these strange scenes and difficulties the Duke of the Abruzzi and his handful of followers pushed until they reached the summit. Here he had narrower escapes from death than he had ever had before. One day when he was making an observation in advance of his party he slipped on a bank of loose stones and went to the edge of an immense precipice. One man came to his assistance and threw him his coat, but as soon as the rescuer began to pull he began to slide down, too. The two were obliged to lie there in suspense for two hours, when more help arrived.

Strange to say, a leopard tracked the Duke for a whole day's journey above the zone where large animals live and took him by surprise and nearly killed him by springing at him.

The Duke found that the Ruwenzori range consisted of six principal groups, to all of which he gave names. The two highest peaks, which were respectively 16,810 and 16,744 feet high, he named Margherita and Alexandra, in honor of the Queens of Italy and England.

It is well known that there are two other achievements on which the Duke of the Abruzzi has set his heart. One is to reach the North Pole, which he is now confident from personal experience can be done by following the route he previously took. The other achievement is to ascend to the summit of Mount Everest, in the Himalayas, the highest mountain in the world.

Following the hounds, Miss Elkins each season has been the talk of the countryside. When her own horses are unavailable she rides anything handy, and has the unique distinction of never having come a cropper.

She was at the head of a famous fencing class for younger girls, and, having mastered the foil, nothing would satisfy her but becoming a jiu-jitsu expert. Washington girls of her set declare her to be the fashionable girl champion at this form of wrestling.

While Miss Elkins doesn't care much for balls, she is an accomplished fancy dancer, having been a member of the much-discussed fancy dancing class in which Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, then Miss Alice Roosevelt, shone particularly. These triumphs were prior to her official advent in society. That advent was inconspicuous, as she frowned down the formal afternoon tea at which most Washington girls are launched.

She preferred a hunting club membership, to which her mother consented at last, for the entrance fee of $10,000 and the annual dues of $3,000 were of no moment in the Elkins financial department. Her own apartments in the Elkins mansion are done in hunter's red and green, and are adorned with many relics of her prowess—loving cups and medals and ribbons galore.

Miss Elkins has that truly feminine attrib*ute, love of* and taste for dress. She wears the most effective frocks seen in Washington drawing rooms. In Summer her taste runs to French creations of a very chic sort. Last Winter she created quite a furore by appearing at a morning parade in a short jacket and short skirt of soft, brown Russian fur, with a hat of the same material. High-laced leather boots completed the odd but engaging ensemble.

Life is never dull where Miss Elkins is. She is an incorrigible practical joker. While in her later teens she wrote and signed with fictitious names a series of the most ardent love letters to her brothers, fooling them for several weeks into believing themselves each the object of a genuine grand passion.

The Duke and Captain Cagni, Who Accompanied Him in His Dash for the Pole.

The Wedding Contract.

IN accordance with the universal custom when European royal persons get married there will be a formal contract signed before the wedding.

Owing to the extraordinary conditions of the present marriage in which one party is a Catholic royal prince and the other a Protestant citizen of a republic, the contract presents many features of unusual difficulty. Roman ecclesiastics and Italian lawyers are already working on this question.

The contract will be divided into at least six articles. It is known that the King of Italy insists that Miss Elkins shall become a Catholic as a condition to giving his consent, without which the marriage will not be legal in Italy. It is understood that Miss Elkins has agreed to this condition, although nothing certain has been made public on this point. From Rome, however, it has been announced that Monsignor Beccaria, one of the chaplains of the royal family, has been instructed to arrange for the reception of Miss Elkins into the church.

The first article of the contract will declare that the King of Italy gives his full consent to the marriage of his beloved cousin, His Royal Highness, Prince Luigi of Savoy-Aosta, Duke of the Abruzzi, etcetera, with Miss Katherine Elkins, who will be described with the same thoroughness as the Duke.

The next article will state that Miss Elkins has become a faithful member of the Catholic Church, and that she agrees to bring up any children that may be born of the marriage in that religion, and to exercise care that they are properly instructed in its duties.

Then there will be an enumeration of the Duke's real and personal property, which will be held as an estate for the maintenance of both of them as long as they are both alive and living together, and shall thereafter pass to their descendants.

Usually in the case of royal marriages the property and dowry of the bride are included in this joint estate, but it is stated that the King of Italy does not wish this to be done on the ground that it would be undignified for a reigning family to receive a dowry from a citizen of another country. It is therefore expected that there will be a separate article declaring that all property now belonging to Miss Elkins or coming to her possession in future shall be her own exclusive personal property, and that the Duke will have no claim over it whatever.

It is certain that Miss Elkins's father, Senator Elkins, will give her a large fortune upon her marriage, and it is expected that her grandfather, ex-Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, whose destined heir she is, will treat her with equal liberality.

In order that there may be no possibility at any future time of asserting that this is a morganatic marriage there will be an article stating that Miss Elkins will share fully in the rank, titles, privileges and rights of succession to the throne of His Royal Highness, the Duke of the Abruzzi.

The Preparations.

THE preparations for the wedding of the Duke and Miss Elkins are nearly completed. It was to complete them that the Duke went back to Italy this Spring after his engagement was really settled.

Ever since then he has been engaged in settling his affairs and making arrangements for the altogether unprecedented event in which he is to figure.

The plans include a religious ceremony, which will probably be performed in Washington, and a state ceremony in Italy, which will compensate for the absence of a state wedding in Italy, which the circumstances of the present case render inadvisable.

The religious ceremony, it is expected, will be performed by a chaplain of the royal family sent from Italy, with the co-operation, no doubt, of the local clergy. The Count of Turin, who has already been to America several times, will, it is expected, act as best man, and Miss Elkins will, no doubt, be given away by her father.

At the later state ceremony in Italy a court chamberlain will announce the bearer of the marriage record. This official will advance and present the record to the King, who will glance at it and hand it to the keeper of the royal family records. The Duke will then enter with his bride. He will kneel and kiss the King's hand in token of homage, and the King will then raise him and kiss him on both cheeks as a mark of affection.

Then, according to Italian authorities, the Duchess will also have to kneel and kiss the King's hand, after which he will embrace her as his cousin. But the King is affable, and if there is anything archaic in the ceremony that the American girl does not like it will be omitted.

The Queen will speak a few words of welcome and embrace the new Duchess. The Dowager Queen Margherita will come next, and after her all the remaining princes and princesses of the royal family will salute her.

Finally the high officials present will have the honor of making their obeisances to the new Duchess and kissing her hand.

The chaplain of the royal household will formally bless the newly wedded pair and offer a prayer for their happiness. The blessing of the Pope will also be conveyed to the Duke and Duchess, but not in Rome or at the Quirinal, since both are occupied in violation of His Holiness's claim of sovereignty.

A large collection of presents of an exceedingly valuable and remarkable character is expected. Queen Margherita, it is stated, is preparing to give the bride six of her finest emeralds set in diamond circlets and mounted in old gold as a necklace. She will also give her a beautiful old ruby plaque for the hair and a necklace of old pearls.

HOW DID SHE DO IT?

The Jersey Lily Tells the Secret Why She Looks Even Younger Than Twenty Years Ago.

MRS. LANGTRY AS SHE IS TO-DAY AT 54. FROM HER VERY LATEST PHOTOGRAPH.

MRS. LILY LANGTRY, by the record of the parish of St. Savior's, where her father had been dean and where she was wed[illegible] and by the testimony of her first husband that she was twenty years old when they were married, in 1874 is fifty-four years [illegible] as the photographs reproduced on this page show, scarcely thirty-five. How has she managed thus to cheat the calendar of nineteen years?

She herself has summed up her rules for the preservation of youth and beauty, which are here reproduced for the benefit of other women who would remain always young.

By Lily Langtry.

MY chief rule for keeping always young is [illegible] word, cheerfulness [illegible] phrase "I have no yesterday."

Any woman can [illegible] a bottomless well of re[illegible] drown her youth and beauty. There are enough mistakes, enough disappointments in the most fortunate woman's life to make this possible. But it is only a foolish woman who permits herself to be submerged.

To be youthful always a woman must cling to cheerfulness as a shipwrecked sailor [illegible] his raft. She must not let it go. To cultivate that cheerfulness she must not be greatly introspective. She must follow the precept of your great American whom I saw at the Senate in Washington, Edward Everett Hale: "Look out, not in. Look up, not down."

[illegible] woman wants to preserve youth [illegible] have been in her mind. If she keeps young in thought she will remain young in body.

I have proved to myself that thought is a great controlling force, and I keep my [illegible] going.

The fact that I believe in the power of mind over matter doesn't blind me to the fact that the foundation and whole secret of beauty is good health. A sick woman can't be beautiful.

Work, sunshine, exercise, soap and water, plain, nourishing food, fresh air and cheerfulness are my recipe for beauty.

At 8 o'clock every morning my maid brings me a cup of tea or chocolate, very rarely coffee, and a bit of toast. This I take in bed. Then I read my letters, look over the papers and am ready for my bath. I take a cold bath, quite ice cold, Winter and Summer. I love it and [illegible].

Then I dress slowly and do some simple physical culture exercises.

My night bath is a real soap scrub with hot water. Then I devote [illegible] or four minutes to deep breathing or physical culture exercises. I sleep with the windows wide open.

I wear a straight front corset and have a large waist and more space to breathe because of it.

I wear [illegible] nothing [illegible] one doesn't need a lot of flatteries.

I use a little powder on my face in everyday life, and of course I have to make up for the stage.

I wash my face with a bland soap and warm water at night and every other time I think it needs it. The skin cannot be kept too clean, and no lotion or cream can ever do the work of soap and water.

I always do my own hair. My maid brushes it, but I arrange it myself. I don't use false hair nor curling irons. I have enough hair of my own and it waves naturally. It doesn't take me five minutes to do my hair.

I don't believe in dressing gowns. I dress for the day in the morning. Then I put on my hat and start for a walk. I wear low heeled shoes and a short skirt. [illegible]

If I [illegible]

I do apply [illegible] of warm water with which later I [illegible] the face, using only my palms, for I [illegible] think the use of a sponge or a face [illegible] tends to produce wrinkles. The [illegible] for about two hours. Then I am ready for breakfast.

[illegible] features, [illegible] expression [illegible] the American wo[illegible] everywh[illegible]

I never dine alone if I can help it. For my 5 o'clock dinner before the play I always invite one guest or several guests. We chat of anything that interests us, that is, that interests us cheerfully. We never [illegible] gloomily. The woman who would remain young and beautiful must [illegible] the plants who seek the sun.

The complexion is to the beauty as important in the first impression it makes as the binding to a book. No woman can look young and certainly cannot be beautiful if she has a dry or muddy complexion. She must give much thought to keeping it clean. Each skin is a law unto its possessor. [illegible] the owner of a skin whose [illegible] is not injured by the use of soap. I question whether any skin has ever been harmed by the use of the best soaps. I use soap plentifully, at least once a day, or oftener cloth, while it does not shrink from the satin touch of a woman's own palm.

Also hard rubbing of the face is liable to separate the skin from the muscles, and that inevitably produces wrinkles. It will produce the sagging of the lower muscles which is even more aging in appearance than are wrinkles. If the readers of this article are unalterably opposed to soap they may use almond meal in the same way, but whatever the agency they must keep their faces clean. The thoroughly clean face is an exception. Look closely and you will see [illegible] of dust that has been permitted to accumulate or you will see the beginning of acne or blackheads, which are merely the remains of [illegible] of dust which has not thoroughly been removed.

After the care of the complexion comes the expression. I am not sure that I should not have placed that first. No matter how well groomed a woman is, or how beautiful always makes for age.

To them I would say be careful with what thoughts you fall asleep. For that expression will remain through all your sleeping hours. And remember that we spend at least a third of our lives in sleep. Compose your features to a charming expression, and at the same time completely relax them as you sink to sleep. As you go to sleep so will you awake. Don't fuss. Neither in your life by day nor your thoughts by night permit worry to enter into the temple of your mind. There are so many trifling things that are not worth a moment's thought. Learn to so regard them, and the ugly little lines between the eyebrows, the horizontal furrows between the brows, will never come to you. The creases at either side of the mouth have been called emotion lines. It is true that you see them deeper in the faces of persons of intense nature. Yet I have observed that much talking brings them, too. Don't talk too much. It is easier to listen and is more agreeable to your companion who is sure to want to do all the talking herself.

When I read, it is always by the best possible light, or I won't read. Eye-strain causes the fine net work of delicate lines about the eyes. While they are yet shallow they can easily be removed. Plenty of sleep—I always take nine hours—and avoidance of the strain that caused them, will soon iron them out.

If you would look young, you cannot afford to neglect your teeth. They should be carefully gone over by a dentist every three months. Decline the gold fillings, that were always grotesque and, thank Heaven, are going out. Insist upon the new porcelain fillings, and go to a first class dentist, who will exquisitely mortise them.

Don't permit the hair to lose its color. Again I return to my motto of cheerfulness. Don't worry its color away. Low spirits soon reveal themselves in dry and lusterless hair and dry hair becomes gray as surely as dry skin becomes wrinkled. Keep the scalp loose by frequent massage, at least once a week. Twice a week is better, three times would be best. Use a cooling hair lotion that has been recommended by your physician. Brush the hair thoroughly twice a day.

ANOTHER NEW PHOTOGRAPH OF MRS. LANGTRY AT 54.

Keep the lines of your figure youthful by an [illegible] exercise. W[illegible]. No gymnasium ever took the place of a long walk in the fresh air. The great out-of-doors is the best friend of the woman who would remain always young and beautiful. Five miles are needed by every woman to keep herself in conditions.

The reason American women are liable to grow hippy after they are thirty is that they have not taken enough exercise in the fresh air before that age. And I must be cruel to be kind—they eat too much. Their meals are ill considered.

Here, for instance, is a luncheon that is tasteful and yet that will not make women fat, nor will it bring to her face the unbecoming after-a-meal flush that disfigures so many who are fond of the pleasures of the table:

Fruit in season (plenty of it).
Sweetbreads with spinach.
Chicken saute with mushrooms.
Asparagus on toast.
Potatoes Parisienne.
Baked spaghetti.
Meringue glace.

This is the day of the expensive corset. It has become a necessity. Economize on your gowns and buy excellent corsets. They will cost and keep your figure in youthful mould.

Here at Last the Example of the Ideal Married Man Has Been Found.

THE Ideal Married Man has been found. On his own little farm, as he calls it, he is known simply as John W. Elder, although there is reason to believe that he is entitled to something more—a title and a medal. The married man who belongs to a lodge or a club, or who finds it necessary to go to the circus or theatre [illegible] from racking business cares, should [illegible] the record of this Warsaw, Indiana, man, who is a shining example for any man who has taken unto himself a wife.

Outside allurements are nothing to John W. Elder. He has spent 19,119 consecutive nights at home up to June 1, 1908, and is still adding to his remarkable record. He has passed up politics, except to go to the polls and cast his ballot, other meetings have no attraction for him; a fire at the opposite end of town does not draw him from the domestic blaze, nor will he even go round the corner at night to attend a neighborhood [illegible].

No "affinity" or "soul mate" has ever come into the life of John. For twenty-seven years he has lavished his affections on Mrs. Elder and his children. Mrs. Elder is indeed a happy woman. Never has she kept the light burning waiting for him to return home late at night, or in the wee sma' hours of the morning. And the youthful Elders! Papa was always at home to play with them, to toddle them on his knees, to help them with their lessons and to chastise them when they needed it for their moral welfare. This has long been, and is still, a happy home.

The record of Mr. Elder is indeed remarkable. He is approaching fifty-three years of age, and has remained at home nearly twenty thousand nights. During this time there were thirteen leap years. This exemplary man has not even taken a night off on the 29th of February once in four years. He is unquestionably the model spouse and parent, the ne plus ultra of domesticity, the peerless champion of the home.

There is nothing that would indicate that Mr. Elder is a fossil, a back number or a legless man. His virtue is voluntary. He remains at home outside of work hours because he wants to. Nor is Mrs. Elder more attractive than other men's wives, which might have something to do with her husband's devotion; the fact is, he is just built that way. At the same time each night when his children were young he summoned them to his side and read some appropriate selection and all joined in singing "Home, Sweet Home," or some other number, and his bliss was complete. Never has he varied his programme.

Even the fact that for several years he was engineer of a pleasure steamer, at a Summer resort, and came in contact with gay throngs, did not once detract his attention from his home. No sooner was the boat in dock than he boarded a trolley car and returned to his wife and children. Such was his daily routine.

He cared not to hear the noted speakers who visited the park, nor to hear a famous musical organization, unless the members of his family were with him, nor to cast a line where he knew the choicest fish could be caught, nor to participate in picnics or to have a part in the other pleasures that brought men, women and children together from many miles around.

He attended strictly to his duties, and now and then explained the workings of some intricate piece of machinery to an inquisitive passenger. Girls with beautiful faces and figures, dazzling gowns and costumes had no charm for him. He thought only of his work and of his family.

Mistrust never entered into the mind of Mrs. John W. Elder, according to her own statement. "John is the best of husbands," is the opinion of Mrs. Elder after a long test, in which, she says he has never been found wanting. "He is just a little different from most men, I guess," continued Mrs. Elder in speaking of her husband's good qualities, which she enumerated as follows:

He never drinks.
He never smokes or chews tobacco.
He is never extravagant.
He is economical but not stingy.
He is seldom cross.
He never swears.
He never stays out late at night.
He is never jealous.
He is not afraid to work.
He can get along anywhere.
He is always happy.
He enjoys being at home.
He always tells me where he is going.
He has no secrets.

These are just a few of the good things that Mrs. Elder has to say about her husband, who is without question the Ideal Married Man. She is backed up in her statements by her children: Mrs. Flora Walters, aged twenty-six years; Mrs. Della Spear, aged twenty-five years; Charles Ellsworth Elder, aged twenty-three years, and W[illegible] Edmond Elder, aged seven years.

When asked why he prefers to spend practically all of his time outside of working hours at home Mr. Elder modestly said:

"I was just raised that way and have continued the habit formed when a boy."

"For some reason, I can't say exactly why, when a boy John didn't seem to care for the swimming hole and forbidden sports," said the aged mother of John W. Elder. "We seldom had to reprimand him for running away, and he never played hookey from school like his brothers and the other boys of the neighborhood. Good habits formed in youth, I think, explains his love for his home. He has always been jes' so good as he is now. This is one instance where the old maxim 'Spare the rod and spoil the child' went amiss, for John never had a whipping. I guess he jes' couldn't help being good."

DO YOU BELIEVE IT?

That a Photograph of the Image in Her Eye Will Identify the Murderer of This Woman?

Photographing a Murderer's Image on the Dead Eye of His Victim.

ONCE more the eye of a murdered person has been believed to hold the image of the murderer. Many times in the past has the attempt been made to photograph this minute picture before the processes of dissolution destroy it.

Always the plate of the camera has shown too vague a reproduction to aid in identification. Sometimes careful scrutiny has revealed a face, but the police have never been able to use it to any advantage.

But Coroner Streeper of Alton, Ill., by applying the camera promptly, has succeeded in getting a negative which shows the features of a man with surprising distinctness. The body of the victim, a woman, was taken from the Mississippi River.

It was apparent that murder had been committed, but who the woman was, and more important, who had killed her there seemed no way of learning. Coroner Streeper, in desperation, thought of the old belief that the last vision seen before death remains fixed on the retina like the image on a photographic plate.

Opening the eyes of the dead woman he peered in, and after his own eye was accustomed to the lack of illumination caused by his own shadow he was soon able to see a face.

Calling to others to look, he was soon sure that it was no illusion or result of his imagination. Then came a hurried consultation with an oculist and a photographer. The oculist, like most men of science, was skeptical until he had seen the face in the eye himself.

He at once said that the image was not on the back of the crystalline lens of the eye, as the photographer maintained, but on the retina. Accordingly the photographer brought the lens of his camera close to the eye of the victim.

The cold eye of the instrument stared into the equally lifeless eye of the woman nearly a minute before the photographer closed the shutter.

After another similar exposure the oculist advised cutting away the cornea and pupil and the crystalline lens of the eye, that more light might reach the retina and the camera have a less obstructed view.

This was done, and when the excision of the lens was removed all doubt that the oculist was right in his opinion, that the image lay upon the retina.

The camera was quickly brought up to the eye again and two more exposures made.

The photographing was done wholly on the right eye, as nothing was seen at all on the left. The camera man at once developed his plates and on all were found an unmistakable human face.

On the first plates the face was vague and distorted, like faces in the clouds, but still it was the visage of a middle-aged man, presumably bald-headed and certainly bearded.

With startling clearness the later plates came out. The man was, indeed, bald-headed, and had a beard, the shape and size of which was clearly outlined. But most striking of all his features was the heavy, aquiline nose and peculiar arched eyebrows.

So marked are these peculiarities that policemen and detectives who scrutinized the plates did not hesitate to guarantee to recognize the man even if he should shave his beard and wear a wig.

A few hours after the pictures had been made the last traces of the face on the retina had faded away.

It is probable that the success of this attempt will cause scientists to experiment on the subject with animals. It is considered likely that study of the subject will bring to light improved methods of retinal photography, and perhaps the injection of some chemical into the veins of the eye will bring out the image stronger, as intensifier does with the photographic plate.

Though science has given but small support to the theory that the dead eye may record for some time a visible picture of the last scene it saw in life, yet there is much evidence that this may be so.

For instance, it is well known that several cases are on record of men who have been temporarily blinded by shock or wound and then, after a considerable period of blindness, suddenly recovered their sight again. In these cases it was found that an image of something at which the blind eye had been pointed some time before the return of the sight was visible for a second or two.

The retina of the eye has always been compared to the sensitive plate of a camera, and the effect of light is in many ways the same when it falls on the eye or the plate.

Just as it depends upon development and fixing of the plate whether or not the image is to last or fade away or even not be visible at all, so in the human retina it may depend upon the changes in the chemical qualities of the blood or the nerves of the eye. It has been suggested by scientists that the flow of blood through the fine vessels of the eye removes images as fast as they are formed on the retina and are conveyed to the brain, and when the heart has ceased to pump and the nervous system ceased to direct the contraction and expansion of the blood vessels and circulation ends, the last image instead of rapidly fading away persists for an indefinite time.

It seems hardly possible [illegible] that the image was formed on the back of the crystalline lens of the eye, as this is a transparent membrane. When transparency ceases, the entire lens becomes so opaque that an image could not be seen even if it were there.

The reason why other attempts at photographing the image in a dead person's eyes have never brought results that police could work upon is partly due to the changes in the shape of the cornea and lens of the eye.

If the victim had a perfect eye so that he needed no glasses in life, yet after death distortions of these two transparent parts blur and upset the image as much as if the lens in the camera had suddenly been tampered with.

The crystalline lens in the living eye changes its shape to accommodate any little error in the permanent structure of the eye, and makes the focus right whether one is looking at a picture or a star millions of miles away.

By removing the cornea and crystalline lens the distortions are obviated and the retina on which the image lies is brought nearer to the lens of the camera and also receives better and stronger illumination.

There is also a blind spot in each eye where the optic nerve enters, and if this happens to be right upon one of the important features of the face which officers of justice are trying to photograph, then identification is made impossible just as if there were a bad spot on the plate at that point.

This blind spot is really blind in life as can be proved by experiment. But when our two eyes are looking at any object one eye sees the part of the object which falls upon the blind spot of the other eye and the brain from the two eyes gets a complete picture and ordinarily we do not notice the defect.

LEGS---Are They More Satisfactory Long, or Short?

HERE, ladies and gentlemen, is set forth one of the really important problems of the day: legs.

Legs! How will you have 'em—long or short?

Over in London there is a great to-do about it. A long-legged literary gentleman wrote a recent magazine article on the disadvantages of having long legs.

"Of legs and the man I sing," wrote he. "And when I speak of legs, I mean short legs. How much to be envied is the short-legged man or woman. How graceful, how modest, how unassuming, how unobtrusive, how altogether lovely and perfect are these abbreviated pedal appendages that serve all the legitimate purposes of nature without slopping over into the atmosphere.

"Standing, these beautiful short legs support the body with admirable adequacy; sitting, they fold neatly over the edge of the chair seat, with no superfluous length to overflow on the carpet or to thrust ungainly knees up under the chin. Ever blessed be the legs that are short."

The effect upon the magazine-reading public of this panegyric on short legs was quite astonishing. It seemed as though the whole world was full of short-legged people who ardently yearned for long legs. The long-legged literary gentleman was overwhelmed with letters setting forth the disadvantages of being condemned for life to short legs. Here are some of the things they wrote:

"Sir: Short legs are out of focus with the universe. The world and all its works are made for long legs. Short legs have no place in them. Short legs are doomed here, and will be damned hereafter. The only short legs that do not bring woe and suffering to their blighted owners are the short legs of Orientals, who sit on the floor. Never yet was a chair built to accommodate short legs.

"From the seats in every public conveyance short legs are condemned to dangle absurdly and pitifully, with no rest for the feet thereto attached, which, having nothing else to do, go to sleep.

"So, I am not a Turk, I am compelled to sit in the seats of the scornful, namely, long legs, to whose measure they are all constructed. Since Turks do not go to heaven, that future abode of bliss (for long legs) will be furnished with chairs. Do not tell me that those heavenly chairs are built for short legs, for I refuse to believe it.

"This is the long and short (legs) of it, and the long (legs) have it."

"Sir—It is quite evident that, in your case, long legs go with short sight.

"You don't have to sit on the floor. You don't have to waddle like a duck. Your wife doesn't keep you chasing about everywhere, in railway carriages and public restaurants for footstools so that her legs may connect with the floor. If you must write why not tackle a subject you know something about?"

"Sir: I have already had one leg amputated at the knee, owing to paralysis due to sitting on long-legged seats (there aren't any other kind). My other leg is going fast. Owing to the selfishness of you long-legged persons, both my originally too short legs will be shorter than ever—then I hope you'll be satisfied."

"Sir: Have you any influence with Parliament? Being a short-legged man, and having for years suffered great pain and risk to my nervous system due to sitting on long-legged chairs, there being no other kind, I have invented a chair with telescopic legs which adjust themselves automatically to correspond with the leg length of the sitter. I want a law passed requiring the universal adoption of my chair, with a penal clause condemning all other chairs and seats whatsoever to be destroyed. There's millions in it."

Probably never before have the disadvantages of being short-legged been set forth so feelingly. These piteous wails from the short-legged even cast doubt on the heretofore unanswerable wisdom of Abraham Lincoln, who, on being asked how long a man's legs should be, answered:

"Just long enough to reach from his hips to the ground."

Obviously, Lincoln's dictum must now be revised. Yet something remains to be said on the other side.

It is not true that all the chairs are of the long-legged variety. Have you never attended a fashionable afternoon tea? If you have, you cannot have failed to observe that short legs were noticeably in the minority. Did you see any masculine legs dangling from the seats of those dainty wicker-work or gold and spindle-shanked confections called chairs?

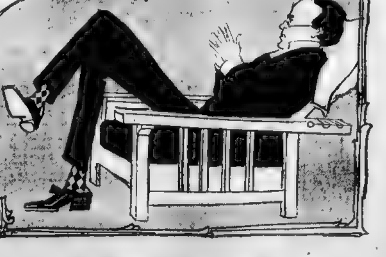
Weren't at least half of those legs sprawling over the floor, while the other half kept their owners' knees thrust up under their chins in the most undignified and awkward manner?

Suppose you are long-legged and it is up to you to sit at your charmer's feet? What on earth are you to do with those long legs? In that otherwise blissful moment wouldn't you be willing to have them cut off and preserved in alcohol?

In getting away from an enraged bull you meet unawares on its native heath, long legs are perhaps more useful than short ones—provided you have a sufficient start of the bull; otherwise short legs are to be preferred—the agony is over that much sooner.

In getting away from an enraged bull, long legs are perhaps more useful than short ones."

"Never was a chair built to accommodate short legs."



"Thrust ungainly knees up under the chin."

THE MAN WHO STOLE THE EARTH

Most Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure Since Jules Verne's Masterpiece.

By W. Holt White.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

The King of Balkania, who has a place at Cookham-on-Thames, where he is known as Mr. Montgomery Jones, is shot at from a launch by an emissary of his enemy, the King of the Sylvanians. Mr. Jones escapes, and himself shoots one of the men in the launch. The affair is witnessed by John Strong, son of Sir John Strong, who comes across the river pondering on the airship invention of his friend, Joe Langley, and wonders how he can utilize it to win the Princess Diana. Strong asks Mr. Jones for the Princess's hand and tells him how by means of Langley's airship he means to become master of the earth. The King "calls" his "bluff." Strong then enlists the airship inventor, Joe Langley, in his great enterprise of winning the King's daughter.

Strong manages to keep a dangerous tryst with the King's daughter, during which he discovers that his enemies have set fire to the airship shed. In rushing to the rescue he is set upon by the King's minions and nearly killed. But he saves his skin and his precious possession by sheer luck.

Strong leaves his bungalow in charge of his old chum, Bellingham, and takes the "Di" up the river to Oxford, where he plans to secrete her while enlisting the co-operation of Arbuthnot—another college chum—and planning a larger airship.

Determined to see Diana again before breaking with civilization, Strong induces O'Gorman, a detective friend, to take him as an assistant to the King's London house, where a grand reception is being given. Thus he finds himself in the Princess's presence. He tells Diana that with his armed airship he is about to go to Balkania and besiege Romberg, its capital city, as a preliminary to "stealing the earth." He will hand back her Kingdom in exchange for her heart. Diana sends him away, warning him that the King may trap him in the house.

Strong is trapped. The King conducts him to an upper room, where, refusing to sell his airship, he is held a prisoner. By inducing his guard to drink drugged liquor prepared for himself, he escapes to the roof and is rescued by Langley and the "Di."

PART II.

A KING IN A RAGE.

THE man from whose grasp Strong had kicked himself clear was no less a personage than the King of Balkania himself, and His Majesty groaned with rage as the steel trap slid to with a snap above him. He saw in a flash that Strong had gained the roof by the method of standing a chair upon the table, and he was quick to adopt the same method. So great indeed was his anger that he was completely heedless of his own safety. He climbed up, and taking the duplicate keys of the steel trap, which he invariably kept in his own pocket, he made haste to unfasten the Yale locks.

Then inserting the tips of his fingers into a little notch in the trap, he drew it back. He drew it back so violently that it rebounded and well-nigh closed again.

The King, his face white with passion, hoisted himself through the trap, even as Strong had done, utterly regardless of the fact that Strong, whom he still imagined to be on the roof, could easily have crushed his head in.

But when, after a struggle that was at once undignified and exhausting, the King scrambled on to the roof, he found himself alone.

He looked wildly up into the sky as though expecting to see the airship, but the "Di" had long since jumped completely out of sight.

He rushed to the edge of the parapet and looked down; he wondered if Strong had been foolhardy enough to jump off. But all he saw was a night policeman leaning against the railings on the opposite side of the road, and looking up to the heavens with his mouth wide open with wonder.

"Curse him!" said the King. "Curse him! He must have got off in the Di'"—he instinctively called the airship by the name which so intensely irritated him—"and that policeman has seen him."

Prince Ludwig had now joined him on the roof, and His Majesty pointed downward to the staring constable.

"Here's a nice state of things," he said. "In about two minutes that confounded idiot below will be making notes in his pocketbook, and then he will tell the sergeant, and the sergeant will tell the inspector, and the inspector will report the matter to Scotland Yard, and goodness only knows where the business will end.

"Unless, of course," and here he laughed a little, "they take the man for a lunatic, which would not be surprising, for the fellow looks the part."

The policeman's wondering gaze was now directed to the tower. His Majesty stepped back hastily and drew Ludwig with him.

"Down," he said, "down as quick as we can. Strong has escaped us, and I should like to know how. The first thing which we must do is to pursue him. Every fox to his own earth, and it is a million to one that Strong makes for the bungalow. He may get there before us, but we shall have to chance that. The only thing is to get the car out at once."

He scrambled down through the hole in the roof, followed by Ludwig, whom he had instructed to draw the trap to.

Then when he stood again on the floor of the room he looked about him and saw the slumbering figure on the couch.

At this unlovely sight His Majesty's eyes blazed with anger. "The scoundrel," he cried, "the unutterable scoundrel!"

And he rushed over to the man, seized him and shook him roughly, but the man only lolled and gaped in his grasp like a dead thing.

The King whipped round to Ludwig. "This is the result of your pretty idea," he said. "You were afraid of Strong—that is about the size of it—and in your efforts to ruin him by drugging his beer you placed a weapon in his hands. Fool! Fool! that I was to trust a man that drinks."

In his rage he lifted the drunken man from the couch and threw him to the floor and then he kicked him savagely again and again.

The paroxysm of his rage passed, and he became once more his own cold, calculating, domineering, sneering self.

"From this moment," he said, "I will adopt no one's suggestions but my own. Be kind enough to bear that in mind, and when I give my instructions be gracious enough to obey them to the letter. Now for a car."

He opened the sliding panel and got into the lift, into which Prince Ludwig followed him.

They descended to the great hall, which was now deserted and half in darkness. A footman was dozing in a chair.

The King roused him with a kick and bade him turn on the lights; then he went into the butler's lodge and rang up on the private wire to his garage.

He had to ring several times before he got any answer, and even at that moment, when haste was above all things necessary, he lingered to be sarcastic.

"I am sorry to disturb you," he said in icy tones through the telephone. "I must apologize profusely. I trust that your sleep has been sweet."

He was angry with some reason, for he invariably kept one man on night duty in the garage, whose business it was to be awake and obey calls at any hour between sunset and sunrise.

"May I trouble you," he went on through the telephone, "to rouse yourself at once? I want the 40, and want it quickly."

He hung up the receiver with a snap.

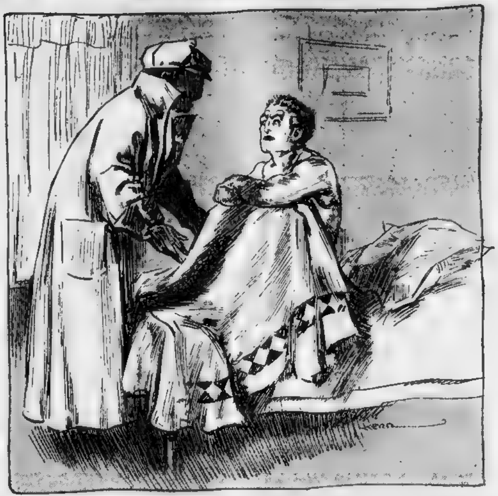
He sent the footman for coats to cover their evening dress, and then the King with Ludwig stood impatiently at the hall door waiting for the car.

It was not many minutes before the chauffeur, ill at ease and trembling, brought the car to the door.

"Get out," said the King to the chauffeur, "get out, you lazy cur, and let Prince Ludwig drive."

He flung himself into his own seat and turned to the chauffeur again. "If you are too tired to walk to the garage," he said, "ring up another car."

Ludwig had settled himself at the steering wheel with the alertness of the born motor driver.



"Arbuthnot rose in the bed so suddenly and so violently that the King had to step back quickly."

"Cookham," said the King. He might have been speaking to his coachman.

Ludwig jumped the car away at second speed, and soon they were racing westward along Kensington gore, making for Richmond and the open country beyond.

Ludwig drove in silence. He had no desire to excite the conversational powers of His Majesty just then. And the King was too busy with his own bitter thoughts to say anything himself.

As they reached Kew the morning was already breaking. The tide of market gardeners' carts was still streaming eastward, the drivers sleeping on their dickies, allowing the horses to jog onward at their own sweet will; but the King was in no mood to be mindful of any danger. "Faster," he said.

Ludwig jammed on the third speed and opened the exhaust, and the car, with a rattle and a roar, bounded on toward Hounslow.

At Maidenhead the King ordered Ludwig to cross the bridge, and Ludwig, grasping His Majesty's intentions, steered the car for the road which ran along the back of the clearing behind the bungalow.

It was now about half past four, and the morning was bright and fair, and the King looked across the sunlit paddock as though he half expected to see the airship there.

Ludwig brought the car to a standstill and stopped the engine for the sake of obtaining silence.

"And now?" he asked.

"Now for an early call," said the King.

He had formed no plan as to what he should say to Strong, if he found him. It was not a habit of his to scheme in advance what he should say to another man; his mind worked sufficiently fast to enable him to rely upon the inspiration of the moment.

He walked through the paddock and round to the front of the bungalow.

Another man would have hesitated in making straight for his enemy's strong hold after the experiences of the night, but the King of Balkania knew no fear.

As he ascended the rickety steps of the veranda he looked to the right and the left; there was no sign of any light; the door, however, stood wide open, and he passed in.

The King paused and surveyed with disgust the litter of the untidy sitting room, and then he started as he remembered that the shed was burnt and that obviously, therefore, the "Di" could not be there. That it was not in the bungalow it was also equally certain, and so it instinctively occurred to him that Strong must have found some other shelter for his airship.

As he could see nothing, His Majesty paused on the threshold to listen, and there reached his ears, through the open door of the room on the right, the sound of a gentle snore.

Without hesitating, he walked across to the little cabin; on the camp bed which Strong had been wont to occupy, Arbuthnot lay on his back, his head pillowed on his arm.

At the sight of this large and snoring young man the King of Balkania was surprised, and not a little disturbed. Strong was evidently sharing his secrets.

He went over to the bed and laid hold of Arbuthnot's feet, and Arbuthnot rose in the bed so suddenly and so violently that the King had to step back quickly in order to avoid coming in contact with him.

The awakened man regarded him with half sleepy eyes.

"And who may you be?" he asked.

"I do not know," said the King urbanely, "whether it is necessary for me to introduce myself in full, but I happen to be an acquaintance of Mr. Strong."

"That's as may be," said Arbuthnot, eyeing him narrowly, "but in any case I should imagine that the time you choose for calling requires some sort of an explanation."

He looked the King up and down, and was to some extent reassured by the prosperous aspect of his evening dress and motor coat—at least, he was hardly a burglar.

"May I inquire," said the King, returning Arbuthnot's stare with interest, "whether Mr. Strong is about?"

"I am not Strong's keeper," said Arbuthnot testily, "nor should I imagine was any one. I am here at his invitation; beyond that I can tell you nothing. Mr. Strong, I should imagine, is about his business, and I should really be greatly obliged if you would go about yours."

"My business," said the King, relieved that his identity was not known to Arbuthnot, "happens to be Mr. Strong's business too. Indeed, I may say I have very urgent reasons for seeing him at once."

"Then I'm afraid you will have to wait," said Arbuthnot. "When Strong left me yesterday he said that he might return at eight o'clock this morning. If he did not arrive by then I was to go to Oxford and wait for him."

"Oxford?" said the King thoughtfully.

"Yes, Oxford, certainly," rejoined Arbuthnot, "and if you were a particular friend of Strong's, and your business as urgent as you say it is, you ought to know that he was at Oxford yesterday.

"Hang it all, sir," he went on wrathfully, "I am beginning to doubt if you are a friend at all, and I suppose I am a fool to have blurted out as much as I have. For all I know you might be the King of Balkania, or Mr. Jones, or whatever he calls himself."

He again inspected his Majesty closely and disapprovingly. Then he added, "Judging from your appearance, I am not at all sure that you are not the villian of the piece. Anyway, it won't take long for me to discover that. I have got a friend here who may be able to identify you."

He bounced out of the sleeping apartment and rushed across the sitting room to the other little sleeping cabin on the farther side. "Here, Bellingham," he yelled, "wake up."

Bellingham, majestic in silk pajamas, rose slowly from Langley's truckle bed and groped about him blindly for his eyeglass; when he had found it he fixed it firmly in his eye and regarded Arbuthnot with mild astonishment.

"What?" he asked.

Arbuthnot seized him roughly by the arm. "Look here, you sleepy-head," he cried, "there is something going on which I do not quite understand. We have got a visitor who says he wants Strong—wants him at once on a matter which concerns his personal safety—but I don't like the looks of him at all, and it appears to me that he resembles the description of Mr. Montgomery Jones—the King of Balkania, you know."

"I say! What!" said Bellingham, and having carefully adjusted his red Morocco slippers, he sauntered out into the sitting room. Immediately his eyeglass alighted upon the King his face assumed an expression of recognition.

"How do you do, your Majesty?" he said. "I hope you are well." And he held out his hand.

The King advanced and took it and stared at the youthful nobleman in the silk pajamas with considerable surprise.

"Really," he said, "I get one shock after another. First of all I arouse this gentleman from sleep to find that I have disturbed a man whom I have never seen before—and now I find you.

"Perhaps you can explain, Lord Bellingham, how it is that I find Strong and Mr. Langley vanished, and you and this gentleman here in their stead?"

But Arbuthnot was now wideawake and in no mind to permit the King of Balkania to lure the innocent Bellingham on into indiscreet disclosures.

"Allow me to introduce myself," he said. "My name is Arbuthnot, of Brasenose College, Oxford, and very good friend of Mr. Strong, and I doubt," he added, "whether the same can be said of you."

"That is hardly polite of you," said the King, "but in the circumstances I suppose that I must overlook it. Fortunately I need not trespass upon your most excellent good nature any further. If Mr. Strong is at Oxford I must go and seek him there."

"If I were you," said Arbuthnot, "I should not take the trouble. F[illegible] remarks that Strong made to me I fancy that you will not be particularly welcome."

"I will risk that," said his Majesty. "As a matter of fact I only parted from Mr. Strong a few hours ago, and we were then in excellent agreement."

He lied, and Arbuthnot shrewdly suspected him of lying, but all he said was:

"If that is the case I am considerably surprised. In the meantime, will you allow me to point out that your presence, at any rate as far as I am concerned, is not greatly appreciated here? Lord Bellingham and I are now about to dress, and I don't suppose that Lord Bellingham wishes to suffer the embarrassment of making his toilet before you. In any case, I do not

"In that case," said his Majesty suavely, "I will get on to Oxford; my car is outside." And without another word he stalked out of the bungalow.

WOMAN, that coquettish being, is displaying even more coquetry than usual in her foot covering this season.

Embroideries, jewels, finest suede and richest satin, the art of gold and silver smiths all go to make more dainty her dainty foot. It seems hardly possible that not so long ago she was complacently clumping around in small editions of her brother's boots, ponderous of sole and broad of heel. This outbreak of foot worship—Trilbyism—has at least the merit of being thoroughly feminine.

The designers of women's footwear must have had many moments of inspiration when preparing for this season, for the shops show quite a bewildering number of new and fascinating models. Light and slight are most of the shoes, and they show a fine disdain for the practical use of walking on city pavements or country roads. Rather do they proclaim, "We couldn't possibly do more than step into a carriage and rest on a velvet cushion!"

The girl who goes in for stout, practical walking shoes must expect to feel distinctly out of it just now. The maid who trips along on paper soles and French heels, her toes laden with silver buckles, is the maid of fashion, and, notwithstanding an occasional turned ankle, is happy in that assurance.

The directoire gowns, over which there is being such a fuss made just now, certainly force the feet upon the attention of the spectator. In Paris they are wearing dresses in the evening and for ceremonious occasions caught up distinctly at one side so as to give an unobstructed view of one foot and ankle. Therefore the foot, being such an important point in the new scheme of things, must be clothed with extra care—while clothing remains for it. It wouldn't surprise any one who follows the trend of fashion very much to see foot covering discarded altogether in an effort to keep in harmony with the clothing of Greek lines. Then instead of gleaming jewels set in satin, as has been seen lately in Paris, we will have the shining jewels of rosy nails.

However, that's not for the person of the every day, practical world. American women have not even taken kindly to the wearing of flesh colored silk stockings which are worn by the French elegante with no regard to the color of her shoes. Long, pointed almost medieval looking slippers she wears fashioned of metallic cloth or richest satin thickly strewn with cabochon jewels. Often these form the only distinct note of color in a costume of carefully draped neutral tinted veilings or chiffon. This of course for afternoon or evening affairs. In the morning she wears shoes of suede or velvet with gleaming buckles.

And there our American women are with her. For the [illegible] has [illegible] tainly might [illegible]. All kinds of buckles, from the jewel set, hand wrought gold buckle which may be bought at fifty [illegible] for a mere five hundred dollars to the buckles of brass which are purchased at a department store for nineteen [illegible] on bargain day. Big buckles [illegible] are reminiscent of Colonial days, and little buckles there are three in a row clasping the instep. But to be strictly "in it" you must have silver buckles, not like Bobby Shafto who 'went to sea, silver [illegible] shoes'—but on your shoes. No doubt he had them there also.

Suede, buckskin, all the soft and pliable leathers are in high favor. If patent leather is used it is not the old fashioned stiff [illegible] to make 'breaking in' [illegible] a period of penitence [illegible] patent kid, but [illegible] which makes it almost [illegible] either.

The period of ornamentation has not passed the shoe world by. For a plain shoe [illegible] adorned in some way, as im[illegible] Even the least "fancy" shoe has a trimming of strips of perforated holes and from them to the satin evening slipper, inset with lace, hand embroidered and studded with imitation jewels, there are only changes rung on the form of ornamentation.

Tan shoes are again to the fore—and sensibly, for they have proved the coolest. [illegible] designated by various names, Colonial, Garden, according to the maker, are cut very low on the [illegible] in front and fasten with a wide ribbon threaded through one or two eyelets, or else they have a [illegible] of leather and buckle of metal.

Shoes made with a seam down the centre and held together with three little straps and buckles are particularly smart and becoming to the foot. Occasionally, only two buckles are employed, but the centre seam is the thing that gives slimness and individuality to this model. Heels are no longer exaggeratedly high, even on dancing shoes. The rather straight Cuban heel is found on most shoes destined for daytime wear.

A new shade of buckskin and suede is likely to prove acceptable as a novelty for informal wear. It is of exactly the same shade as the yellow chamois gloves we have all been wearing, and is usually fashioned with a high tongue and large leather covered buckle. With outing dress of brown linen and chamois gloves these shoes are charming.

Copenhagen blue and doll violet suede shoes are found already to complete costumes of those shades, and very fascinating they are, for they are cut on slim lines and make the foot look attractively small.

Cravenetted cloth is a novelty shoe fabric imported from England. It claims to be wet resisting and easily cleansable, and is made up in several good models, sometimes having a slight trimming of leather of the same shade. This cloth comes in all the new shades, which is a recommendation to the woman who realizes the value of having footgear which exactly reproduces the tone of her gown.

Nowadays the woman of abundant dress allowance has shoes to match every costume, but this is an impossibility for all women. However, if a little care and forethought is exercised in choosing the Summer supply of shoes a very good effect can be obtained with a moderate number of shoes.

Pumps have earned for themselves rather a black eye, for women have grown tired of the eternal slip-slip at the heel and the consequent wearing out of numberless pairs of stockings. Various methods of preventing this slipping have been tried, but so far I have failed to find anything which really stops it.

White shoes will always be worn with all white costumes. The makers, appreciating this, have produced very charming white shoes for warm weather wear. Buckskin is probably the ideal material, showing to advantage as it does the perforated foxing so fashionable. Narrow black patent leather trimmings are applied with discretion on white suede and kid shoes for wear with frilly frocks.

Wonderfully daring combinations of leather are seen at the smartest bootmakers. It seems as though for once they had decided to throw conservatism aside. Thus in an establishment where many women of the "400" choose their footwear I was shown a slipper of black patent leather the toe thickly strewn with vivid blue polka dots! A beautifully cut slipper, also of black patent leather, had a high tongue and heel of brilliant scarlet satin—a quaint conceit.

Colored suede slippers with strappings of black soutache braid across the toes are seen. Slippers of metallic cloth in lovely shot colorings of silver and rose and gold and green make an ideal accompaniment to Summer dancing frocks, but their price is prohibitive for the average woman.

After wearing low shoes and cobwebby silk stockings for walking in snowstorms of course it's perfectly consistent that when the thermometer approaches the hundred mark women should suddenly take to boots. So, no doubt, you'll not be astonished when I assure you that high shoes will be worn by the ultra smart woman this Summer.

Boots of suede, the daintiest, with buttons of pearl, in shades of gray and white and all the modish colors, will be found in her boot closet. White kid boots with black soles and heels are sure to be there, for they are only to be found at exclusive makers, and therefore will not be in danger of becomming "common."

Of course, there must be stockings to match each pair of shoes, for, whatever we may do in the future, we have not as yet taken up the French woman's dearly loved flesh colored stockings, as I said before. The only exception will be in the stockings worn with low tan shoes. Then, in imitation of her brother, the up-to-date girl will wear navy blue stockings.

Colonial shoes of suede in gray and neutral tints have big hand chased silver buckles. To wear with them come belts made of the same leather with buckles to match.

The Art of Proper Introductions.

THERE are certain points connected with introductions which are not always clearly grasped by those introduced, to judge from the questions which now and again reach us on the subject. The situation is so momentary there is little or no time for reflection, any more than when crossing a street between a street car and an automobile, when the decision lies between going forward or stepping backward. At the crucial moment of being introduced comes the opportunity of doing one of two things and of being satisfied or dissatisfied with the decision made.

Rules, however wise they may be, cannot be made to fit every circumstance of social life, and, broad as they are, they yet are open to many exceptions, and if you cannot exactly drive a coach and horses through them, as in the case of some of our laws and regulations, you may get around them by taking advantage of the aforesaid exceptions. How to act on the occasion of an introduction is determined almost entirely upon the reason for its being made, and by whom and to whom the person is thus introduced.

Even the locale has something to do with it, and thus a variety of issues are raised, upon which an instantaneous judgment has to be given. The mind has to travel with lightning rapidity over the ground to arrive at a correct course of action; but the mind does not always respond to the call made upon it; it hesitates, and acts not upon the outcome of reflection, but upon the spur of the moment.

The received rule is not to shake hands, but merely to bow, on being introduced; but this under certain circumstances would not meet the case; it would disappoint the one introducing and the one introduced. For instance, if a relative of the former is the person introduced a bow would be a very chilling response to the introduction made; to shake hands, on the contrary, would be the correct thing to do, and both persons should offer at the same moment this cordial recognition.

On the other hand, if a casual introduction is made without any premeditation, and those introduced are totally unknown to each other, an exchange of bows is all that is required from them.

Among the exceptions of not bowing only on being introduced come in the introductions made between young ladies and elderly ones, and between young ladies themselves. An elderly lady, as a general rule, shakes hands with a girl introduced to her with the idea of being cordial and kind, not to say condescending, and girls generally shake hands with each other in place of bowing, as acquaintanceships formed by them have not the moment that attaches to those of older ladies. Besides, a greater readiness to make friends is the privilege and characteristic of youth.

Men take very much the same view as regards introductions as do women; that is to say, if an introduction is made by a relative of the man introduced the men would shake hands, and not merely bow. This holds equally good where intimate friends are concerned; they almost rank on the footing of relations, and a cordial reception is given to an introduction thus made. When casual introductions are made of necessity rather than of intention men do not shake hands. When "I think you have met Smith" or "I think you know Mr. Smith" is said—the one by a host and the other by a hostess—nothing further is required from either than a bow and a smile of acquiescence, accepting the introduction, and a disclaimer is not expected if Mr. Smith is not actually known. The uncertainty is an excuse for making the introduction.

One of the points upon which some of our [illegible] are not very clear is with [illegible] rising from their seats on be[illegible]. This question does not tro[illegible] they are usually found standing, or they are brought up to a person to be introduced, and even if a poor man ventures upon sitting down for a few moments [illegible] at home or before dinner is [illegible] he springs to his feet with [illegible] when any approach is made [illegible] of introducing him to a fellow [illegible].

With ladies it is otherwise. They do not rise from their seats either at an at home or before dinner is announced or after [illegible] or when calling people are introduced to them or when they themselves are introduced.

Half an exception occurs, it is true, at crowded at homes, when to rise and talk to the lady introduced is almost a necessity. There is no vacant seat for her to take, and, therefore, if both do not stand conversation is at a deadlock, as the few first conventional remarks made by either are lost in the general buzz going on around; also it is awkward and ungraceful for a lady to bend over one seated for the purpose of saying a few platitudes. "Introductory remarks," or remarks following upon introductions, have too often a melancholy ring of commonplaceness about them, and are distinctly trite. How can they be otherwise?

To venture out of the commonplace into originality would be suspicious of eccentricity, and no one wishes to be considered a little odd.

Before and after dinner when introductions are made between ladies it is to those seated near to each other, and therefore there would be no occasion to rise, as there might be at an at home. There is no question of a lady rising from her seat when a man is introduced to her, unless that man is her host, when she should rise and shake hands with him, or a clerical dignitary, a bishop, for instance, if opportunity allows of it and on a semi-official occasion.

Introductions often have to be made at afternoon calls, supposing that two or three callers only are present and the hostess feels that she must render talk general by making some kind of introduction, direct or indirect, as she thinks best.

The ladies thus introduced remain seated and bow. They do not shake hands, even under the exceptional conditions previously referred to, but they would at once join in the talk that passes for conversation, and on departure would shake hands with the relative in question after having shaken hands with the hostess and having expressed pleasure at meeting this near relative, mother or sister, or whoever she may happen to be.

Introductions between callers made under enforced circumstances have not much bearing on future acquaintance. Those introduced pass so short a time in each other's company and know practically nothing of each other's surroundings that they are [illegible] whether at future meetings they ought to recollect that such introductions have taken place, and whether they should bow or forget. Actually, it would be correct to bow if the opportunity is given to do so, but unless the wish to bestow recognition is mutual it is of little avail to endeavor to enforce it. It would not be worth the having if grudgingly given, and it would be worse still were it withheld.

Some people have short memories for faces, and others are short sighted, and both these drawbacks have to be reckoned with in a recognition expecting recognition from a person to whom one has been thus introduced.

YOUNG WOMEN TO TAKE PROMINENT PARTS IN BUNKER HILL PARADE

MISS BESSIE KELLY.

MISS HETTIE TURNBULL.

FAMILY OF EIGHT SLAIN BY MOTHER

Woman Chloroforms and Shoots Husband and Six Children; Then Commits Suicide.

Cadillac, Mich., June 13.—Cadillac is aghast with [illegible] over the crime of Mrs. Daniel Cooper, who with pistol and chloroform killed [illegible] and six children and then herself, [illegible] they had all spent their last evening [illegible] as a festive occasion.

In every instance the woman, who was once committed to an insane asylum, shot her victims through the head. The dead are:

Daniel Cooper, forty-eight; Mrs. Cooper, forty-five; Fred Cooper, eighteen; Harry, fourteen; Inez, eleven; Samuel, ten; Georgiana, five, Fourth [illegible] and a half years old.

Bodies were strewn all over the home when Mrs. Cooper's [illegible] and other neighbors entered the home of the Coopers in the morning. The only one alive of the whole family was the son Fred, who died later at Mercy Hospital, unable to tell more of the tragedy than to gasp out: "Mother did it."

Mrs. Cooper's body lay across that of her baby girl on a bed in one of the bedrooms, and beside her was, every chamber empty, was the revolver with which she in her frenzy had slain her family.

It is believed that the crazed mother chloroformed the members of her household before she slew them with the pistol, for in one of the rooms was found a four ounce bottle which had contained the drug.

That the woman had [illegible] her deadly design for [illegible] was indicated by her actions the night before the crime. She took all her children to the Alamo Theatre, where a special vaudeville show was in progress. She induced the girl selling tickets to admit the whole family for half a dollar and to the warning that the concession should not be regarded as a precedent, [illegible]:

"You will never need to let us in cheaply again, because none of us will ever come here for this."

Then she bought candy and peanuts for the children and all walked about the streets happy in the company of the mother who, within a few hours, slew every one.

NOISELESS GUN FOR UNCLE SAM'S ARMY

All United States Troops to Be Equipped If Maxim's Claims Are Established.

Springfield, June 13.—The entire United States Army and Navy will be armed with the now famous noiseless gun, just perfected by Hiram P. Maxim, if the officials of the Bureau of Ordnance find for the invention all that he claims for it.

The world renowned scientist, after experimenting for months on the "silent" rifle, has been in communication with the Government from his home in Hartford, and he has been asked to demonstrate the weapon's possibilities.

Though the United States magazine rifles manufactured at the great Federal arsenal here are almost never sold or loaned, Mr. Maxim has been furnished with one of the guns and 100 pounds of ammunition for experimental purposes.

The silencing device which proved so successful at a private demonstration Friday at the inventor's home, he will now endeavor to adapt to the magazine rifle now used by the Government.

The possibilities of slaughter in warfare with a magazine rifle burning smokeless powder and making no audible report are so appalling that both army officers and peace advocates declare it would tend to make war impossible.

Col. F. E. [illegible], commandant of the U. S. armory here, said to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American last night:

"I understand that Mr. Maxim has been in communication with the officials of the Ordnance Department, and a set of requirements were made out and sent to him. They are very rigid, but Maxim is very sure that he can meet them, and the Government will arrange for tests just as soon as he is ready.

"If the tests are satisfactory the Government will undoubtedly accept the invention, because it is a big step ahead in the perfection of firearms, one which overshadows the invention and adoption of smokeless powder.

"The army and navy have just been equipped with the new style magazine rifle, but they would all be [illegible] led in should the Maxim silent gun be accepted."

GUILD GOES BACK TO STATE HOUSE TOMORROW

Governor Will Resume Duties Interrupted by Long Illness.

Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., will return to the State House at noon to-morrow to take up the duties of office which illness forced him to relinquish three months ago. In a letter yesterday to Acting Governor Draper, he announced that his physicians have pronounced him able to resume work. The acting governor sent a letter of congratulation. With the Legislature of 1908 prorogued, there remains but little work for the State Executive except the making of appointments to State offices and the transaction of routine business.

TAGS NET $10,000 FOR SPRINGFIELD CHARITY

800 Society Women Help Home for Friendless.

Springfield, June 13.—To-day was "Tag day" in Springfield and the plan tried so successfully in other cities met with a generous reception here. Over 50,000 tags were sold and between $9,000 and $10,000 realized for the Home for Friendless Women and Children. Society women entered into the spirit of the occasion and recruited 800 workers. Mrs. James D. Safford paid $200 for a tag, the highest price reported. Another tag went for a one cent stamp.

BOSTON'S TAX RATE SOARS, DESPITE MAYOR'S ECONOMY

State Calls for $5,500,000 This Year, Hub Shar Being Half Million Higher Than in 1907.

Up go Boston's taxes, despite the retrenchment of Mayor Hibbard and the efforts of the Finance Commission.

That's the prospect, but through no fault of Boston or its city Government.

Taxes all over the State will take a jump.

The reason lies with the State of Massachusetts. Last year the State assessed in round numbers $4,000,000 upon its cities and towns, after paying its debts, to keep the wheels of government going round.

This year it demands and must get $5,500,000—high water mark in State requirements and an increase over last year of almost 40 per cent. To provide this sum the cities and town of the Commonwealth must pay.

Here is how the State tax demand has increased:

1906	$3,500,000
1907	4,000,000

This is how Boston's share of State taxes has increased:

Boston State tax, 1907	$1,438,800
Boston State tax, 1908	1,978,350
Increase	$539,550

Half Million Increase.

Boston's share in the settlement is over half a million more than it was last year, and as the tax rate is computed by an addition of the State and county tax to the strictly city tax, there looms up the prospect of a startling increase in the Boston tax rate for 1908.

Last year Boston had a tax rate of $15.90 per $1,000. Of this, $13.20 was assessed as a straight city tax, ninety cents as a county tax and $1.80 as a State tax.

The county tax will remain the same as last year. It has varied little in a dozen years. The strictly city tax shows a promise of being lower, for retrenchment has been the watchword in departments and increased expenditures have resulted only in the police, fire and school departments where legislation and ordinance has compelled these increases.

With the usual normal increase in valuation in Boston, running from $2[illegible] last year to $21,000,000 in 1906 and $2[illegible] 000,000 in 1905, and with the saving in many departments, a reduction in the tax rate might have been secured this year.

But with the extraordinary tax bill of the State upon its cities and towns, and bearing most heavily upon Boston, for Boston pays thirty-seven per cent., no hope remains for a decrease in the Boston tax rate despite the retrenchment of Mayor Hibbard, but Boston is confronted with an increase in its total rate.

Assessors End Work.

The assessors yesterday completed their work of assessing real estate, but it will be several weeks before the total increase in valuation over last year will be announced.

If Boston should show a substantial increase over a year ago, every $1,000 of increase would help towards lightening the burden which the State has imposed upon the taxpayers of Boston.

Real estate men claim, however, that the assessors' returns this year will not show the increased valuation of the past two years. They base their contention upon the claim that during the past two years, under Mayor Fitzgerald, property values were boosted in order to keep the tax rate down and that no increase in valuation can be made this year except from new construction.

The auditor's figures show, however, that Boston has enjoyed a steadily healthy growth year after year. In the last year of Mayor Collins it increased in valuation $22,792,110. Other years before show a steady increase year by year.

With a normal increase in valuation this year, and with expenses being kept down as they have been, Boston would have had a decrease in its tax rate. But the extraordinary increase in State expenditures has dispelled all such hopes.

Mayor Gets a Shock.

State officials ascribe the cause of the remarkable increase in State expenditures principally to the taking over by the State of all city armories, an item alone of $417,000, to the expenditure of $170,000 for the new State institution at Wrentham, to the refunding on a suit of $94,173 to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; to $100,000 spent over the estimate on harbors, and to $10,000 spent on the retirement of veterans in the employ of the State.

Mayor Hibbard was given a shock when he [illegible] on his arrival from Maine yesterday of the [illegible] that the State had assessed against the city.

[illegible] the matter up with the assessors. Mr. [illegible] was all the Mayor cared to say, except the remark that he was "surprised."

Bostonians will be "surprised" also from present indications when their tax bills come in, but it's up to the old Commonwealth, not to the city.

CAMBRIDGE CHIEF SHIFTS THE POLICE

Michael Brennan, New Lieutenant, Will Go to Headquarters Nights.

Owing to the police appointments made last week by Mayor Wardwell of Cambridge, a shift was announced by Chief Pullen at 6 o'clock [illegible] last evening. Howe, who has been acting lieutenant at the Central Square station, will resume the Harvard Bridge beat. Sergeant John Canney, who was raised from the ranks at Station 2, will report for night duty hereafter at Station 4, North Cambridge, to fill the place left vacant by Brennan.

CHALLENGE CUP EVENT WON BY ELL AFTER HOT RACE.

A. J. Drexel Paul's Gelding Larone Made Game Struggle for Honors, but Is Beaten.

HANDSOME BELLE FALLS

Mr. Baker, Rider of Mare, Fortunately Escaped Injury in Mixup.

By ED. COGSWELL.

Without the horse, society would have been sidetracked at the opening of the Country Club's annual flat and steeplechase running meet at Clyde Park, Brookline, yesterday, as the 5,000 persons in attendance went out with the express purpose of paying homage to the fleet equines entered in the seven races scheduled and whenever there was a close finish the cheering and petty [illegible] from gloved hands [illegible] can enjoy good wholesome sport.

Frank Ware was missed in his vocation of starter, his place being filled this year by [illegible] Montigue, who, to say the least had difficult work in getting away his fields, the delay at the post not only being tiresome but during the afternoon he got two of the horses left at the post, one [illegible] being well thought of in winning his race.

[illegible] assistants was the well-known Ike W[illegible] against his physician's advice [illegible] Hospital to be on tap when the barrier went up. Ike has been on duty at the running meetings at Clyde Park for so many years that the oldest follower of the sport has forgotten just when he began.

Mr. Baker Thrown in Race.

The initial event furnished the only accident of the day, the mare Handsome Belle falling [illegible] was ridden by Mr. Baker, who was fortunate in escaping with only a [illegible] from the high toss he received.

The most successful owner was A. J. Drexel Paul of Philadelphia, who carried away two firsts with his stable and a second, the winners being Grand Vedette and Renault, while his Larone came second to Ell in the best race of the card.

The feature event was the Challenge Cup steeplechase over the sticks, and it proved well worth all that had been said would happen when the horses entered were turned loose to head the summary.

Ell in a Hard Drive.

From the drop of the flag Ell and Larone had it hot and heavy, both running head and head nearly one circuit of the course, but in the final rush after the waterjump Ell was the stronger, finishing a length in the lead over his doughty opponent, though both were under the hardest kind of a drive in the battle around the half mile to the windup. The time of the race, 4:59 2-5, was only a second short of the record for the steeplechase course.

In the Brookline steeplechase William C. Hayes won a popular victory with Grandpa in very easy style over the other two starters. Mr. Hayes took the mount on his favorite, which caused the spectators to heartily applaud him when coming through the homestretch many lengths in the lead. Grandpa has been one of the standbys of the running meeting in past seasons, and he has usually made good by cleaning up one or more of the timber events, or on the flat.

Handicap Race was Interesting.

There was much interest in the fifth race, a handicap for four-year-olds and upwards, as many of the best horses at the meet were down to start. It was a hard race all the way between Renault, Manuinymoo and Hogan, the first named not gaining any advantage till the last turn for home, but Manuinymoo even then kept Weir hard at it in getting his mount home a length to the good.

The regular listed third race on the programme was divided into two events rather than take chances of somebody getting hurt with too big a field crowding in making the short turns of the track, which might result in one or more of the contestants taking a fall.

In the first division the winner came in Grand Vedette, while President Monroe, the property of Henry J. Morris, was the best in the second division.

Swimming Girl's Work Cut Out.

Swimming Girl had her work cut out in capturing the Galloway race, the opener of the day's card, Mr. Clarke just getting her to the winning post in front of Sir Gaze. The roan mare is owned by Allan Pinkerton, the one who has gained some notoriety through his collection of detective agencies throughout the country.

After the races the stewards, on information received, placed the measuring stick on Swimming Girl and found she was over height, and were consequently obliged to disqualify her and award first to Sir Page.

Telifare had only to romp in, securing her event over a field of five, though she allowed Amos Judd to keep to the front for half of the distance on Sufferage, for when ready he jumped Telifare in the lead in quick time.

The second day of the meeting is Monday and the windup comes next Wednesday. There are six and seven events listed for each of the coming days, each with a nice lot of horses entered.

The officials during the meet are the following: Stewards—Charles Hayden chairman, Rodolphe L. Agassiz, F. Lothrop

RIVERSIDE A. A. AN EASY WINNER

At the outing of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament at the American League grounds yesterday afternoon, the Riverside A. A. of Cambridge defeated the Holy Name of the above church by the score of 8 to 2. White, for the Riverside, pitched a fine game. W. Falkner and Murray played a good game for the Riversides, while Fallon and B. Murphy excelled for the Holy Name.

After the ball game there was a wrestling bout between Ed. Willis of Detroit, and Young Burns of New England, catch-as-catch-can. The first fall was won by Young Burns in seventeen minutes. But owing to a severe sunburn, Willis gave the bout to Burns, claiming he could not do himself justice. They then gave an exhibition bout, which lasted ten minutes, neither obtaining a fall. George Twohey was referee.

ALL STARS BEATEN.

At Fort Revere yesterday, the Fort team defeated the All Stars of Boston by the score of 14 to 8. The score:

HOLY CROSS NINE UP IN AIR, LOSING TO HARVARD, 4-3

Misplays by Worcester Boys Make it Easy for Crimson to Triumph.

BY DYKE CLARK.

Harvard took advantage of errors by Holy Cross and beat the Worcester boys by the score of 4 to 3 in their second game of the season, and by so doing gave their cause a big boost for the Yale series which starts this week.

It was also revenge for Harvard, as the team was beaten by Holy Cross not many weeks ago on their own field. The result would give every reason to believe that Harvard has a big chance with Yale, since Holy Cross beat the Blue, though it was by the small score of 1 to 0.

Had Holy Cross cut out the misplays they would have made it decidedly interesting before the game was finished, as they showed stronger at the bat than Harvard, knocking in all three runs which they tallied.

Hicks Hit Freely at Times.

While Hicks was hit freely at times the team behind him played masterly ball, not a semblance of an error being tabbed and at critical stages they proved good with the stick.

It was the hit and run game which upset Holy Cross and sent them in the air in the middle of the game which gave Harvard a lead which she managed to hold to the end.

In Mansfield Holy Cross brought out its best pitcher and he certainly pitched a superb article but could not win the game single handed. Harvard only collected four hits off his delivery and they were scattered widely in the game.

Both Teams at High Pitch.

Both teams were keen after the contest and a big delegation of Holy Cross rooters made things lively by cheering constantly but failed to steady their team, which semed to be a mixture of good and bad players.

The Worcester collegians started out well and kept in stride with Harvard for the first few innings. Then came a spasm of flightiness and Harvard benefited to the extent of going into the lead, which she only had to hold in order to come out in front with flying colors.

Barring being bumped hard in spots, Hicks pitched the winning variety for Harvard, using his spit ball to good effect and striking out six. Carney, the giant first baseman of the Holy Cross crew, was the only one to land on his curves and his home run was an error of judgment on Aronson's part, as the fielder misjudged the driving fly. Carney was also responsible for another run as he knocked out a double scoring Mansfield.

Barry, the star shortstop on Holy Cross, who has been sought for by several big league teams, Chicago signing him, made the wierdest play of the game when he threw Leonard's grounder into the bleachers and allowed the Harvard captain to trot around the bases for a run.

Catcher Larkin was also effected by the heat as twice in succession he picked up short bunts in front of the plate and threw them wild to first, letting in a tally.

The Holy Cross contingent went wild when their pets crossed the plate in the first inning. Shay, the first up, drew a base and was sacrificed to second and took third on an out. He scored on Barry's fine hit to left.

Harvard, not to be outdone, got going at the start. Leonard got a base and stole, was sacrificed to third and scored on Harvey's long fly. Aronson reached second on Steven's muff of his fly, but was left.

Barry Threw to the Stand.

Harvard took the lead in the third when Barry made his wonderful heave, but Holy Cross tied it up in the fourth on Carney's homer.

In the fifth Holy Cross had its ascension. Aronson reached first when Carney got tangled up on his grounder and threw high to Mansfield, who made an attempt to cover the bag. Lannigan bunted and Larkin threw on the ground to Carney. Currier tried the same bunt trick and Larkin again made wild fling, allowing Aronson to score and Lannigan to reach third. Currier kept on to second. Simons made the first out. Harding bunted and Lannigan was out at the plate trying to score, while Currier made third. Harding was caught off first and while being run down Currier made a bluff for the plate and drew the throw getting back to third safely and Harding taking second. Hicks closed the inning with a fly to Barry.

Harvard made its last run in the fifth, Leonard leading off with a clean hit to left, taking second on a wild pitch. He started for third before Mansfield pitched, but O'Rourke dropped Cashen's throw and Leonard hung to the third corner. McCall and Harvey could not bring him in, but Aronson slammed out a hit to centre, scoring his captain.

Holy Cross got one in the sixth on doubles by Mansfield and Carney, but in the last three innings only one man reached first. The score:

BURNS AGAIN PUTS BILL SQUIRES AWAY

This Time Tommy Finishes His Man in Eight Rounds in Paris.

Paris, June 13.—Tommy Burns, the American heavyweight claimant, and Bill Squires, the Australian scrapper, fought eight rounds here to-night before Burns finally concluded to end the affair with a solar plexus punch that floored Squires and permitted him to count nearly all the stars in the heavens.

Knowing the character of his man as a result of his one-round victory over him in San Francisco, Burns did not extend himself at any stage of the fight. At that Squires [illegible] a greatly improved battle.

For four rounds the [illegible] was rather a [illegible] the Frenchmen manifested [illegible] displeasure. In the fourth round Squires managed to get one over on Burns, landing a hard jolt on Tommy's nose.

This seemed to wake Burns up, and in the concluding rounds he put forth a little steam and badly punished the big kangaroo. The last two rounds witnessed some pretty hard milling, Burns doing most of the punishing, but not escaping altogether.

Early in the eighth Burns waded through Squires' guard the same as though there had been none and soon got in the blow that quieted Squires.

Burns received an ovation as he left the ring.

HOMER BY HANNIFAN BREAKS UP GAME AND DOVES WIN

Hair-Raising Finish of Contest at South End Grounds Gives Fans Their Money's Worth.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Pittsburg got away in front and at the quarter led by a length. At the half Pittsburg let out a wrap and shot ahead another length. At the three-quarters Pittsburg, without an effort, showed three lengths of daylight in front, but in the stretch Pittsburg blew up and Boston came on and won in a canter. That is the way the race horse reporter would chronicle the engagement at the South End grounds yesterday. But the baseball reporter, in less elegant language, would be forced to say that Boston defeated Pittsburg by a score of 5 to 3 in an uphill contest, the locals making all their runs in the eighth inning, free hitting on a disastrous error doing the business.

It certainly was a hot old game and the yells of the populace when the Doves got busy in the eighth round could be heard as far as the subway. From the way things were going the Doves didn't appear to have a chance, but they got there with both feet and everybody except Wagner went home satisfied.

Before going any further it may be said that the great Wagner is the maddest man in town to-day. This earnest ball player was the whole thing up to the time when the Doves turned defeat into victory. The only Honus had scored two of the three runs made by Pittsburg, starting both tallies with a two-bagger up against the left field fence. He had run bases with great judgment and had assisted at a cut at the plate. Then with the score a tie in the last of the eighth he made a marvelous play at second which the umpire gave safe, whereat the great Honus wept and would not be comforted.

Wagner's Strenuous Kick.

At the time the score was a tie there was a man on third with one out. Ritchey popped a high fly which Kane muffed and Ritchey kept on to second. Kane recovered the ball and threw high to Wagner. Honus jumped in the air, stabbed the ball with one hand and swept it on the runner before he reached second. Umpire Rudderham didn't see it that way and called Ritchie safe. Then Wagner kicked good and hard but, of course, the decision went as rendered. Hannifan came along with a tremendous clout over the left field fence for a home run and it was all over bar the shouting as five runs had been scored.

Pittsburg's runs came as easy as lock work and it looked for all the world as if the visitors would win in easy fashion. The Doves had threatened once or twice but divided plays and a piece of stupidity on the bases cut them off. Neither Flaherty nor Camnitz had been hit very hard and although the Pirates had erred in the field their misplays had not cost a run. This was the situation when the Doves came to bat in the eighth with the score 3 to 0 against them.

For a starter Beaumont drew a pass. Then Browne slashed a grounder that went through Abbaticchio's legs like a knife through boarding house butter. The ball rolled to right field and Wilson put down his hands to stop it. He never touched it and the sphere kept on as though bewitched. Beaumont made the dust fly and got to third, while Browne raced to second.

Hannifan Breaks Up the Game.

It was up to M[illegible] but he only posted a [illegible] fly to centre on which Beaumont was [illegible] to score. Bates was [illegible] on the spot, however, for he drove [illegible] to left, scoring Beau and [illegible] across the plate and Dahlen lifted the high fly [illegible] Kane muffed and Ritchey [illegible] making the bag on the umpire's [illegible] Honus he looked to [illegible] Kane [illegible] to Wagner. Bates had [illegible] on the infield play, but [illegible] he walked home when Hannifan [illegible] the first ball pitched to [illegible] left field fence, scoring Bates and Dahlen ahead of him. These five runs were enough to win.

The Pirates [illegible] hard in the ninth and got two men on base, but the third man was out before he could get a run.

The Pittsburg team played rocky ball, [illegible] of eight errors. Strange to say [illegible] the one that counted in the [illegible] was [illegible] muff by Kane in the eighth. [illegible] played a star game at short and Hannifan pulled off a couple of [illegible] at third. Graham caught [illegible] game, and Flaherty pitched one of his best.

[illegible] drew a pass in the first, but [illegible] Ritchey threw [illegible] and while Wagner was arguing with [illegible] over a called strike, Flaherty caught [illegible] napping off first.

Doves Have a Chance.

The Doves had a fine chance in the last half. Beaumont singled and Browne hit to Camnitz, who threw wild, Beaumont going to third and Browne to second. M[illegible] to [illegible]. Bates lifted to Wilson and Beaumont [illegible] a perfect throw to the plate [illegible] ten feet.

The Pirates pushed a run across in the second. Wagner doubled to the left field

PREPARE FOR TEST CASE

Jockey Club Attempts to Arrange Test Case for New Betting Law.

GRAVESEND, Long Island, June 13.—Eleven arrests of men who are alleged to have either made or accepted bets, and one of a bookmaker who loudly asserted that as a free American citizen he would not submit to police coercion, is the net result of the activity of the police at the Gravesend race track this afternoon.

Six of the prisoners were discharged later by Magistrate Tighe in the Coney Island Police Court, and five will have a hearing to-morrow.

Prepare for Test Case.

Not a single one of the cases will be used in the attempt to test the new racing laws, and the dismissal of the charges is looked for next week. However a test case will be framed and arrangements to this end were made this afternoon at the office of the Brooklyn Jockey Club which was attended by representatives of the racing interests and the authorities.

Gravesend track was a rather dreary place to-day and the public, present only to the number of 5,000, as against 15,000 on other Saturdays, didn't seem to care a rap about the races. Not a handicap rewarded the winning jockeys, though most of the favorites won.

Police Commissioner Bingham didn't tell the whole truth when he said he would have 200 police at the track. If there was one there were 400 uniformed men and fully 200 more in plain clothes. They seemed to be everywhere. A man couldn't sharpen a pencil without finding a sleuth looking over his shoulder.

One Wanted His Rights.

All the arrests, with the exception of the man who asserted his rights as a citizen, were made in the field and nearly all the trouble took place there. It is certain that quite a number of bets were made in the grandstand enclosure and the club house but so quietly were they placed that the officers had no way of making arrests.

Immediately after the day's races President P. J. Dwyer of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, and his lawyers, Harry and Watson, induced First Deputy Police Commissioner Baker and Inspector Flood and Assistant District Attorney Elder to come to their office and they proposed that a test case be arranged next week with the object of getting a prisoner out by means of habeas corpus proceedings. The lawyers claimed that no law existed that could stop two men from making a wager and if the new law has such a prohibition in view it would be easy to prove it unconstitutional. Mr. Elder would not immediately agree to be a party to the test case and said he would announce his decision Monday.

Five Held for Hearings.

The eleven prisoners were taken to the Coney Island Police Court. Shortly after Magistrate Tighe arrived there with William C. DeBois, the well known betting commissioner, in the latter's automobile. DeBois furnished bail for all those who were held. Six of the prisoners were charged with offering to make wagers. They gave fictitious names and were promptly discharged.

One Alfred Fisher, a bookmaker, who had congregated a crowd around himself by announcing in a loud voice that Governor Hughes could go to —— and that he never would submit to such an outrage, was held in $500 bail on a charge of disorderly conduct. The four others, Mortimer H. Kahn, John Lyon, Morris Gold and Leon Cohen, charged with accepting wagers, were held in $1,000 bail each until to-morrow morning.

QUAKER CITY MOTOR CLUB HOLDS MEET

Philadelphia, June 13.—Exciting races entirely free from accidents marked the second annual Spring meet of the Quaker City Motor Club at Point Breeze track this afternoon, and one of the biggest crowds that has ever attended an auto race meet in this city was in attendance.

The first long race of the day was in the fifth event, when eight cars faced the starter. The contest was for ten miles, and during the entire distance it was a close and interesting struggle. The Thomas led [illegible] for eight miles, when engine trouble forced it to leave the track, and a Pullman, with Bob Morton at the wheel, jumped into the lead and was never headed, winning by more than a quarter of a mile. Another Pullman, piloted by C. B. Kirkham, finished second, and J. F. Brown's autocar was third.

The Autocar, driven by Edw. A. Frena, won the fifty-mile, the last event on the program. Another Autocar, driven by Joseph F. Brown, was second, and a Studebaker, driven by Frank H. Yeager, was third. The winner's time was sixty-six minutes, fifty-one seconds. Frena won by a lap and a half, and was vociferously cheered by the crowd.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS WALTHAM REGATTA

War Canoe Race Is Feature Event, Medford Club Winning After Exciting Race.

With ideal weather conditions, and in the presence of thousands of wildly cheering spectators, the seventh annual regatta of the Waltham Canoe Club was held yesterday afternoon on the Charles River in front of the club house. On account of the fact that many of the contestants were entered in several events, the races could not be run off as quickly as desired, and six hours elapsed before the last event was decided.

The broad expanse of water where the races were held was crowded with canoes, row boats and launches. So tightly were the gaily-colored crafts wedged together that at one point they completely bridged the river. The Metropolitan Park police patrolled the course and maintained admirable order. Not a single accident marred the day.

The greatest interest centered in the war canoe race. Crews from the Medford Boat Club, Waltham Canoe Club, Dedham Canoe Club and Crescent Canoe Club competed over a course seven-eighths of a mile in length. In the trial heats Medford beat Waltham by a few feet in 6 minutes 8 2-5 seconds, and Dedham beat the Crescents in 6 minutes 6 3-5 seconds. In the final heat Dedham and Medford provided the most exciting affair of the kind ever witnessed in Waltham. Medford took the lead at the start and held it til the finish line was in sight, but in the last ten feet the Dedham paddlers seemed to lift their boat from the water with the power of their stroke and crossed the line a scant foot in advance of their rivals. The winning crew was made up as follows: G. Merritt, C. Daniels, T. Koppman, J. Keenan, F. Mahern, C. Hamilton, B. French, G. Ames and D. Rogers. The time was 6 minutes 3 2-5 seconds. Summary:

BANK OFFICIALS HAVE SPLENDID FIELD DAY

Favored with ideal weather, the members of the Bank Officers' Association of Boston and their friends to the number of 3,000, enjoyed the annual field day of the association yesterday at the Riverside recreation grounds.

From 3 o'clock until 10.30 in the evening there was one round of merriment, and at the conclusion of the day's festivities all went home tired, but happy.

Two special trains carried the party from the South Station to Riverside, reaching there at 3 o'clock. The fun began with a ball game between the national banks and the trust companies, on which several former high school and college players were lined up. A score keeper started to keep tally, but though he was young and vigorous he gave up keeping count of errors and misplays, and only counted the runs. The game lasted seven innings, but that was long enough for the players. At its conclusion it was said the trust companies won by the score of 6 to 4.

Bentley, the Brookline gymnasium pitcher, pitching for the winners, got nine strikeouts. Freeman, for the national banks, struck out two. Each team was said to have made four hits and numerous errors. One of the features of the game was the diving propensities of "Buck" Freeman, first base for the trust companies. He went after two fouls among the crowd and got them both, although falling over several people.

Water Sports Big Feature.

Following the ball game came the big feature of the day—the water sports at the swimming pool by the Brookline Swimming Club, under the direction of Captain "Let" Rich. The participants included "Let" Rich, James B. Greene, Leo Johnson, William Johnson, Laurie Johnson, Ben James, Irvine "Dutch" Elliott, Eddie Wessner, Fred Wessner, Emil Lutersee, Carl Lutersee, Frank O'Hearn, "Rad" McCormack, Frank O'Loughlin, Jimmie Carter, Herbert Holm, Dick O'Neil and Walter Newcomb.

The summary of the events:

50-yard scratch race—Won by W. Newcomb, E. Wessner, second. Time—30s.

Tub race—Won by E. Lutersee, E. Wessner, second.

100-yard handicap race—Won by "Dutch" Elliott, 10s.; "Let" Rich, scratch, second. Time—1.03.

Funny costume race—Won by E. Wessner, Laurie Johnson, second.

Hurry scurry race—Won by Ben James; Lee Johnson, second.

Relay race between teams captained respectively by "Let" Rich and James B. Greene. Won by Rich team. The winners were "Let" Rich, O'Loughlin, Newcomb, E. Wessner, W. Johnson, Carter, E. Lutersee and Lee Johnson. Greene's team was comprised of Greene, O'Hearn, James, Laurie Johnson, F. Wessner, O'Neil, Elliott and Holm.

Rich Gave Exhibition.

"Let" Rich, who will represent Brookline at the Olympic games, gave an exhibition of his Monte Cristo sack dive, and James B. Greene gave an exhibition of fancy swimming and life-saving. There were also exhibitions of diving by Emil Lutersee and Herbert Holm. "Rad" McCormack was announcer, J. D. Brennan starter and W. Brennan timer.

From 1 o'clock until 7 a collation was served under a large marquee on the grounds. All were entitled to go up and down the river in canoes and steam launches, and there were several band concerts during the day and evening. The day's events came to a close with dancing in both pavilions.

The success of the field day was due in large measure to the activities of the entertainment committee which had charge of the affair, composed of Frederick Cate, president of the association ex-officio; Arthur Y. Mitchell, chairman; Charles C. Handy, secretary; Frank B. Lawler, Horace F. Fuller and Walter F. Spinney.

M'LEAN AND LOGAN WIN BIKE TEAM RACE

Riding like a champion Hugh MacLean won the thirty-mile motor paced team race at the Revere track last night defeating Butler, Bedell and Logan. Logan and MacLean were teamed against Butler and Bedell and won the event as Logan got third place, Butler beating him out by a lap.

MacLean won from Butler by six laps and Bedell was several behind Logan for fourth place.

Butler's riding was sensational after he got going right in the last five miles. Previously he suffered from motor troubles and lost distance to MacLean, but toward the finish putting on a burst of speed he passed MacLean like a shot and pulled Bedell along with him, but the latter could not hold him.

MacLean was fortunate to have the best pacing outfit which aided him greatly in beating Butler as the veteran was riding faster at the end than the Chelsea flyer, and it looked as if he would have taken his measure.

Bedell had lots of speed at different periods of the race and would have been a big factor, but both his motors broke down under the terrific going at the half distance mark. Logan plodded along and when he saw the others disabled picked up and jumped into third place.

On the third mile MacLean's wheel punctures, and he was forced to drop his pace and change wheels. In doing so he turned a somersault, but got going again. Butler gained four laps on him and Bedell three as a result.

MacLean started to bring out the pace terrific clip to make up lost grounds, but Butler and Bedell refused to be shaken, Old Nat especially riding like a fiend.

At ten miles Butler was shaken in a brush with Bedell, and MacLean got back one lap. Bedell also got shakey after going a couple of miles, and lost one of his laps to MacLean.

At 15 miles both Butler's and Bedell's motors had trouble, and they were obliged to ride unpaced for a spell, while MacLean tearing around for all that was in him piled up the laps, getting back all he had lost, and more too.

Pat Logan, MacLean's partner, also made good use of the difficulties of the other team, and came up from fourth place to second.

When once in his stride again Butler got second place away from Logan, but Bedell could not get his position back and his team was beaten. The winner's time was 47 49 1-5.

Tom Connolly won the five-mile open amateur race, with Heinander second and McFarland third. Time, 13 37 3-5. The mile handicap went to Hayes, 180 yards, Bretto, 185 yards, second, and T. Connolly, scratch, third. Time, 2 06.

RED SOX PLAY YELLOW BALL YET THEY BEAT BROWNS 6 TO 5

Burchell Pitches Good Game but Is Miserably Supported by His Mates in St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 13.—The Red Sox took the opening game from the Browns to-day six to five. The contest though replete with atrocious fielding was an exciting one and had the fans guessing until the final Brownie was out. Burchell had a decided edge on Howell and with any kind of fielding behind him would have won way out in the daylight. As it was, however, the numerous slips by the Boston infield gave the Browns many opportunities, permitting them to draw the game to an exciting finish.

A heavy morning rain put the grounds in a fearful shape, this being responsible for the many errors of the game. Boston hit Howell hard and often and with better work on the bases would have tallied more runs in the third, when a bunch of four hits off Harry and an error put two tallies in Boston's column.

With one gone in the eventful third, Thoney smashed a clean single to centre. Lord rapped a hot one past Tom Jones that sent Thoney to third. McConnell's grasscutter bounded off Williams' chest and McConnell got an infield hit, Thoney scoring. Gessler's smash rolled past Schweitzer and Lord tallied. McConnell also tried to score but was out, Schweitzer to Wallace to Stephens. Sullivan ended the inning with a long fly.

Thoney There With a Double.

Boston added another in the fifth. Thoney doubled to left; took third when Stone let the ball roll by him and tallied on Lord's sacrifice bunt. The Browns tied it up the seventh on a walk to Stone, Schweitzer's single and Thoney's error.

The tie up, however, was short lived, for Boston came right back in the next with two more tallies. With one gone Lord rapped to center for three bases and after McConnell had walked, tallied on Gessler's base hit to left. Sullivan sacrificed. Wallace fumbled Unglaub's grounder and McConnell tallied.

Another was added in the final session. Wagner was hit by a pitched ball and after being sacrificed to second tallied when Burchell lined centre for a base.

Fast fielding by both teams prevented scoring in the opening inning. Thoney opened the game by going out on a hot grounder. Lord's smash was too hot for Ferris, and after the ball got through, Hobe Wallace grabbed it and tossed low to Jones, Lord taking second. Williams robbed McConnell of a sure hit by going down for a neat stop. Gessler ended matters with a slow roller to T. Jones.

A sensational catch by Thoney of Schweitzer's liner up against the left bleachers, and Wagner's one-handed stop of Stone's warm grounder, retired the Browns runless in their half of the first.

The locals looked ticketed for a run in the third, after Howell had led off with a double, but after Harry had reached third on Stone's out McConnell settled matters by a fast chuck to the plate on Schweitzer's bounder getting Howell by several feet.

McConnell Fumbles.

With two gone in the fourth and the bases filled, thanks to a walk, an infield single and Burchell's error, McConnell fumbled Stephens's grounder and Jones tallied. Burchell ended the flurry by fooling Howell on a wide third strike. Successive errors by Lord and McConnell, and a long fly by Wallace, gave the locals their second tally in the fifth. McConnell, Wagner and Unglaub turned a fast double play in the sixth, retiring the Browns when they looked threatening.

Burchell put an end to a rally in the eighth by fanning Stephens and Howell. The Browns made a strong bid for the game in the ninth. Stone doubled and Schweitzer singled. Morgan then replaced Burchell. After Williams had rolled an easy one, Stone tallied on Wagner's fumble and a single by C. Jones put Schweitzer across the pan. T. Jones forced Wallace at third and McConnell ended matters by going back for a good catch of Ferris's pop. The score:

Cleveland, June 13.—Liebhardt won his own game in a pitchers' battle with "Long Tom" Hughes by a score of one to nothing by driving out a three-bagger in the ninth. One was down and Hughes fanned Josh Clarke before Liebhardt scored on Bradley's single, the Naps fourth hit off Hughes. The batsmen of both teams were helpless, infield taps and strike-outs retiring them one, two, three with few exceptions. Score:

SUMMERS BEAT ATHLETICS.

Detroit, June 13.—Dygert had poor control, but was virtually unhittable, and kept Detroit from scoring except in the sixth, when passes to Crawford, Cobb and Killifer were lumped with Jones's safe bunt and O'Leary's scratch single that Dygert deflected from Nichols. Summers was in fine form and pitched steadily throughout. Murphy's score was the result of misjudgment by the Detroit outfielders. The score:

WHITE SOX WIN 10 IN ROW

Chicago, June 13.—The White Sox won their tenth straight game to-day by defeating the New York Yanks by the score of 5 to 1. Orth was in the box for New York and was hit hard at opportune times. Chase and Kleinow made a dumb play that gave the Sox one run. With the bases filled, Chase threw to catch a runner coming to the plate. Kleinow did not see the ball and it rolled to the stands. The game was played upon a wet and soggy field. Time was called twice because of heavy showers. The score:

LOSES ITS FIRST GAME.

Plymouth, June 13.—The crack Somerville team defeated the Plymouth Cordage Co. team to-day in a fast game, 5 to 1, being the first game the locals have lost this year. The features of the game were the pitching of Cate, fielding of Cassidy, and Massey for Somerville; and the fielding of R. Ford, Johnson, and W. Ford for Plymouth. HARRY BRAWLEY WON CROSS COUNTRY RUN

The eight-mile cross country run under the auspices of the North Cambridge A. A. to Lexington and return was won by Harry Brawley, the well known Roxbury runner, who was pressed most of the distance by Charles Henry of Lynn.

There were fourteen starters and eleven finished. The three prize winners and their time were Harry Brawley, St. Alphonsus A. A., 54m. 30s.; Charles Henry, Lynn, 54m. 15s.; W. G. Shannon, Tewksbury, 55m.

ELIOTS BEAT WALCOTTS.

The crack Eliots of Roxbury defeated the strong Roger Walcotts of Dorchester at Franklin Field, by the score of 5 to 4, in a hotly contested 10-inning game. Healey's three-base hit in the tenth won the game.

ORIOLES, 5; EAGLES, 1.

In a very exciting game of ball the Orioles of West Roxbury defeated the Eagles of Jamaica Plain by the score of 5 to 1. The Orioles won the game by their grand rally in the eighth, scoring all their runs in that inning.

WORCESTER WHIPS FALL RIVER IN GAME OF FREAK PLAYS

Barberich Pitches Well For Winners, Allowing But Two Hits Off His Delivery.

Worcester, June 13.—Worcester defeated Fall River here this afternoon 4 to 1 in a peculiarly played game.

Messenger, the first batter for the visitors, scored the only run for his team first time up.

Logan made a single after he let the bat fly out of his hands and the play scored Bradley. It is the first play of its kind ever seen here.

Bradley made a seemingly impossible double play, unassisted, taking a liner off Toomey's bat close to the ground at first base and getting Connors off the base by yards.

In six of the nine innings the visitors went out in order and in two of the remaining innings only four men faced Barberich. The score:

The second game was comparatively easy sailing for the visitors up to the eighth inning, when the local team managed to score five runs by bunching their hits. Hannafun was freely hit in this inning and had to be replaced by Delaven. Scores:

YALE SCORES EASY VICTORY OVER PRINCETON NINE.

Clark, Generally Effective Southpaw, Lasts Less Than Half Inning.

HEYNIGER THEN GOES IN Deciding Game Will Be Played in New York on Tuesday Next.

New Haven, June 13.—Yale tied Princeton in their annual baseball series by winning to-day's game, 8 to 2.

Clark, the southpaw, who has puzzled Yale batsmen in the past two games, lasted less than half an inning. When he blew up, Heyniger held down Yale till the eighth; scratch infield hitting netted Yale four more runs.

Princeton squeezed one run home in the second and another in the ninth.

For the first time a triple play was registered on Yale field. It came from Yale's attempt to work the squeeze in the third inning. Murphy, who led off, reached third on Sides' wide throw to first. Williams got away with an infield hit and stole second. Wheaton's attempted sacrifice proved a pop fly which Heyniger gathered. He slammed the ball to third as Murphy was crossing the plate and Sides tossed it to second before Williams could return.

Princeton fielded loosely, Heyniger's box work alone saving his team from being scored against nearly every inning.

For Yale Grover Cleveland Fels won the captaincy for next year by eight faultless chances and by leading his team at the bat with three singles. Fels is a Lowell, Mass., boy.

Murphy's throw from left field, closing the game, was spectacular and save a run. With two out, Dawson drove a grounder, which bounded over Fels' head, scoring Vaughn. Sides tried to reach home from second, but was nabbed by a clever throw.

Tigers Act Badly in First.

The game opened with a slop-over by the Tigers. Tad Jones and Dines, the first two men, being passed. Murphy hit to Clark, who threw late to Sides to get Jones, and the bases were filled. Williams hit an easy grounder to Clark, who threw wildly to Fish, all three runs scoring. Williams, who reached third, scored on Wheaton's sacrifice.

Heyniger replaced Clark and struck out eight men in seven innings.

In the [illegible] Fels [illegible] Jones opened with infield singles. On Murphy's bunt to Fish, Fels was fielded out at the plate. Dawson threw to first to try to get Murphy and completed a double play. He was late, but Tad Jones tried to score from second on the throw and was nabbed at the plate. William's grounder to Heyniger closed the inning without score.

Heyniger Bungled Grounder.

In the eighth Murphy's grounder was bungled by Heyniger. Williams drove one too hot for Fish and Wheaton's bounder was thrown to third late by Heyniger, filling the corners. Clifford's single scored Murphy. Williams scored on Van Vleck's out and Wheaton followed on Philbin's out. Fels drove Clifford home with a poke to rightfield. Sides scored for Princeton in the second on a free pass, Harlan's grounder, which gave him second and third, and Wheaton's muff of Wister's fly.

More than 10,000 people, the largest crowd which ever witnessed a Yale-Princeton game here, was present. The tie will be disposed of on American League park, New York, next Tuesday, and more than 20,000 have asked for tickets. The score:

THIRTEENTH STRAIGHT WIN

DOVES TURN DEFEAT INTO VICTORY IN EIGHTH INNING

Pittsburg Pirates Make Eight Errors, but Only One of Them Figures in the Scoring.

[illegible] but Wagner scored.

In Boston's half Dahlen led off with a two-bagger to the right field foul line, but was doubled [illegible] to Abbaticchio. Ritchey followed with a safe hit to right, but Graham flied out.

In the third Thomas singled with two down, and Leach walked, but Clarke was easy on a grounder to Flaherty. Browne got a life in Boston's half on Leach's poor throw, but there were two out and McGann made the third on a pop fly.

Wagner [illegible] leading off with another two-bagger to left, took third on Abbaticchio [illegible] scored on Kane's fly to Browne [illegible] after throwing poorly to the plate. In Boston's half Bates reached first on Wagner's poor throw. Dahlen flied to Clarke. Camnitz threw out Hannifan and Batty tossed out Ritchey.

The Pirates went out on [illegible] flies in the fourth. For Boston [illegible] got second with two down [illegible] collided with Thomas and [illegible] fly, but Browne fanned.

In the sixth Wagner [illegible] second when [illegible] walked, but [illegible] to Flaherty. [illegible]

Gibson [illegible] seventh, but the next two [illegible] flies.

Again the Doves Fail.

Boston had another fine chance in the last half, but once more failed to tally. Hannifan started with a single to [illegible] and Ritchey followed with a safe one in the same direction. Graham got a pass, filling the bases. Flaherty fouled off [illegible] who threw to [illegible] quick work, heaved the ball to first in time to double Flaherty.

There was still a chance however, as Ritchey got to third and Graham to second, but Graham took too big a lead off second and was caught off the base. Ritchey had to make for the plate and was finally run down, Wagner backing up Gibson and making the put out.

In the eighth Clarke singled with one out and Wagner flied to Bates. Browne muffed Abbaticchio's fly after a hard run and there were runners on second and third. Kane singled to left, scoring Clarke, but Batty was out at the plate.

Boston scored five in the last half and then Pittsburg came in for the ninth. Phelps, batting for Wilson, fanned and McCarthy, batting for Camnitz, walked, Gibson in the meantime retiring. Ritchey to McGann. Thomas singled to left, but Leach ended the game by fouling to Graham.

It was a [illegible]. The score:

MAJOR P. THROWS DRIVER AND WINS

D. J. Nelligan, Owner of Gelding, Injured, and Gave Way to Crowley.

Medford, June 13.—Rose Martin won the best contested race in the matinee of the Fellsway Driving Club at Mystic Park to-day, it requiring five heats to decide the better trotter of the four starters in Class B.

When scoring for the initial heat of Class D, Major P. reared and threw out his owner and driver, D. J. Nelligan, from the cart, but Mr. Nelligan held gamely to the reins and prevented the gelding from running away. Mr. Nelligan was [illegible] so from the fall that Walter Crowley had to do the honors in the race, and he did so well that the event was Major P.'s after four heats. In the first he was placed third for breaking and running, while in the second heat Axtefold did so much running that he was set back a position and the heat awarded Major P. In the remaining events the winners had it rather easily.

There was one of the biggest crowds of the season out to watch the sport, the grandstand being filled to overflowing, while the course was lined from end to end with carriages. Summary:

PACING CHAMPION IS LADY LAURIN

Defeats Al Ray in Fast Time at Lynn Driving Club Matinee.

Lynn, June 13.—A big crowd turned out to-day to see the two crack pacers of the Lynn Driving Club, Lady Laurin and Al Ray clash for the pacing championship at Rockdale Park, Peabody, and the friends of the mare were made happy by her winning in straight heats in the fast time of 1:06¼, 1:06. In both trips she cleverly and the foot over Al Ray.

It is now hoped that L. N. Burke may elect to start his noted gelding My Star, 2:03¾, champion of the Charles river speedway, in Boston, against Lady Laurin, and not a few of the club members are firm in the belief that when the dust of the conflict will have settled she will be dangling his scalp as the fruits of victory.

A red hot race to-day was between Helen R. and Prospect Boy, the former heading the summary. In the first couple of heats the finishes between the two was extremely close, but in the final heat the mare got the bulge on her opponent.

It was expected that the Rose Mack-Sailorman race would be a corker, but Sailorman was far from being in form and Rose Mack had only to turn the course twice to get the blue ribbon. Summary.

YALE AND HARVARD CREWS FAST GETTING INTO FINE FORM

Blue's Freshmen Eight at Present the Worst on the River at New London.

New London, June 13.—With the change in weather, no time has been lost by the Yale and Harvard coaches in getting their respective crews into good form. While the high winds prevailed a few days ago comparatively little was done in the way of hard rowing, but since the wind has been eliminated the oarsmen in each rowing camp have had their full share of real work.

As both Yale and Harvard eights went over the four mile course Thursday night, it was not expected that any serious rowing would be done Friday, but contrary to expectation, the Yale crews had another hard grind. This was partially due to the circumstance that the launch went up against trouble in the morning, blowing out one of her condenser tubes so that she could not follow the crews. Light practice was the order in the forenoon, but in the evening the four-oared crews were given another stiff workout up stream.

Yale Four Speedy.

Coach Kennedy is saying nothing about the final disposition of his varsity four, nor is it expected that he will make a final decision for a few days, although there is no doubt in the minds of spectators as to which of the two crews is the better. The present Yale varsity four is certainly superior to the Harvard varsity four-oar crew, and it's an almost sure bet that they will win the four-oar race from Harvard on June 20.

The Yale varsity eight, while not as smooth as Harvard, shows a great improvement since the arrival on the Thames. During the early part of the week and up to Wednesday one was led to believe from the reports sent out from Broadview that the Yale varsity eight was in very poor form and that it was a walk over for Harvard in the big race, but the spectators along both shores have begun to sit up and take notice of Kennedy's crew. Within the past three days there has been a noticeable improvement in the crew and they seems to be coming right along and if this improvement continues for a week or ten days longer it will be no cinch that Harvard can beat her.

The Yale freshmen eight are about the most ungainly crew that the Elis have brought to the Thames in several years. They are awkward and clumsy in their shell and the Crimson freshman crew have it all over them so far as appearances go. There is no doubt but what the several recent changes in this boat have had a bad effect on the crew.

Yale Freshmen Awkward

Livingston has been put back in his former place at stroke and Frost, who has filled the position has been put in at No. 6, taking the seat previously occupied by Hyde, who is still limping around quarters the result of an operation for boils. It is likely that Hyde may stay out of the shell for good, as Kennedy believes it is too much to make another change. As at present made up the Eli freshman crew is really the worst on the river. However their lack of form is only temporary and a day or two more of crew work may make quite a difference in the appearance of the eight.

The Harvard varsity crew continues to show up splendidly in its practice work, although they have not been given and really hard work since their arrival at Red Top.

Harvard Varsity Improving.

The Harvard varsity eight improves daily and gives a good impression to the old shell backs along the river, but although Harvard arrived on the Thames with fresh laurels on its oarsmen's brow, the oldtime oarsmen along the river are not inclined to accept all the statements made as to the eight being a sure winner. That Wray has a fine eight every one admits, but the form of Yale's crew is well liked and the men are snappy and full of endurance and able to hold a speed over the four-mile course that ensures a tight race even if Harvard has what she is accredited with having, the best crew in many years.

The freshman eight is undoubtedly the best Crimson freshman crew seen on this river for a long time, and up to tonight it looks like a sure winner.

To-night the Harvard varsity was given a work out over the four-mile course under the watch. The crew were taken aboard the launch, and with the shell in tow ran down to the draw bridge, where the men boarded the shell and were sent away up the river. The crew were kept well together and were very smooth in their oarsmanship.

Conditions Perfect.

The conditions were superb. There was no wind and the river was perfectly flat. The time for the four miles was 20 minutes 45 seconds.

The freshmen were given light work, not going out until after the varsity had returned to the boathouse. Dr. Ladd, in charge of the crew, says the men are in splendid condition and fit to row their race [illegible].

To-morrow the Harvard crews will be the guests of Assistant Manager Oliver Iselin on board the old America cup defender Vigilant, and will be taken for a sail in Long Island Sound.

MOSQUITO FLEET ON CLUB RUN

With the roar of a gun aboard the flagship of the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club, at 3 P. M. yesterday, seventy-five yachts, of the fleet, gently filed away and crossed the bow of Commodore C. H. Small's yacht Period, led by Vice-Commodore George Crawford in the Sentinel, and Rear Comodore's A. Leach's U. & I., dipping their colors as they passed in review.

The flag-ship then taking the lead the fleet sailed away on their club run to Hingham to spend two days in a general jollification.

The wind, a full sail, southeasterly, carried the fleet by the pier at City Point, where wives and sweethearts waved them fond good byes.

For the past two days Fleet Captain Leach has been exceedingly busy planning for the entertainment of the fleet on their arrival and his efforts will be appreciated, as he has spared himself no trouble to make this run the most successful ever given by the club.

On the arrival, after finding a snug berth, the supper was cooked by the chef of each crew, and with appetites sharpened by the sail the crew sat down to fill up on the best the markets afford.

After dining, the bay was soon alive with tenders, and captains and crew went aboard the commodore's boat to be entertained and to swap stories. Finally, worn out with the day's fun, each crew returned to its boat, berths were made up, the fleet sought dreamland and the first day of the run was over.

Many of the smaller and open boats will go down to join the fleet to-day and sail home with them this evening.

LINWOODS COULDN'T BAT.

The Columbia A. C. of North Cambridge defeated the Linwood A. A. of Roxbury at Rindge playgrounds by 11 to 2. The game was one-sided, for the Linwoods couldn't connect with La Freniere's delivery after the first inning. By defeating this team the Columbias made it ten straight games. The features of the game were the star fielding of Avenel e and Greenwood, while Martin and Dusseault batted well for the winners. Canning excelled for the losers. Ditchette, the Roxbury High School twirler, was hit very hard, but sharp fielding stopped the Columbias from making more runs.

HUDSON A. C. EASY.

Hudson A. C. of Roxbury was easily defeated by the Poo-La A. C. of Somerville by the score of 14 to 4. The features of the game were the batting of Graham and the pitching of Joe Lee for the winners. Breckey excelled for the losers.

ADAMS SQUARE

BAY STATE ANGLERS HOLD TOURNAMENT

The first tournament of the Massachusetts Anglers Club was held in the old Frog Pond on Boston Common yesterday afternoon, and was in every way a success. While the entries in the various competitive events were not large, the rivalry between the various contestants was sharp and every event was closely contested.

F. A. Nicolls Jr. and Lawrence Chapman were tied for first honors at the finish but the prize was awarded to Nicolls, who won the toss for the trophy.

There were three competitive events and one exhibition on the programme. The first was casting for accuracy with a 5 oz. rod; the second, casting for distance with a 5 oz. rod and the third, casting for distance with an unlimited rod and unlimited weight.

In the first event both Chapman and Nicolls demonstrated their prowess by scoring 90 out of a possible 100 in five casts each at the three targets, located 50, 55 and 60 feet respectively from the platform erected for the casting. Frederick Hill, the third contestant in this event, had one bad cast, which brought his final mark down to 93½.

In the casting for distance with a 5 ounce rod, Chapman threw the fly 82 feet, Hill 69, and Nicolls 75. The final competitive event, casting for distance with an unlimited rod and weight was captured by Nicolls with a cast of 93 feet. Chapman scored 90 and Hill 80.

Following the competitive events an interesting exhibition of fly casting was given.

Though competition in yesterday's tournament was confined to club members, it is the intention of the organization to hold open contests in the future, and in the Fall a championship fly casting tournament to which representatives from the anglers clubs of both Chicago, Detroit and New York will be invited to send competitors.

Bay State A. A. Contests Will Bring Well-Known Drivers Together in Exciting Brushes.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The postponement of the races of the Bay State Automobile Association from Memorial Day until Wednesday afternoon [illegible] in no wise whatever effected the interest centred therein; in fact to tell the truth interest has [illegible] ly when it is known that [illegible] trant has [illegible] the members of the [illegible].

Although [illegible] of the [illegible] since the date of the postponement [illegible] authoritatively [illegible] will be present. Oldfield is now in Boston, having returned late last week from [illegible] land, where he had been to see that his car was put in shape for the races. Since his accident at Lowell he has done a host of work, the result being that by the use of express companies and by constantly watching the work on his car it will be in Boston by to-morrow in ample season to be turned up for the races. Seymour, whom, it was [illegible] Christie car in the Jamaica trials without a radiator and was defeated by but one car, that by only a fraction of a second, writes that the car is in absolute racing condition and that both he and Christie will be on hand to do battle against the entrants on Wednesday next.

This was good news to the committee and especially to Basle, for a man who has been selected to drive a match race with the Flying Dutchman against Seymour and the front drive car. Basle has got his car in fine condition, so much so that he declined to take chances in changing the gears for the Worcester hill [illegible] a week ago. Basle is anxious to try his strength against the best men in the game and he will find that opportunity in the free-for-all event in which he will be pitted against Oldfield, Owen, De Palma, [illegible] and the others.

Every one of the original entrants is expected to be on hand [illegible] as not a single one has withdrawn [illegible].

This is an exceptional experience [illegible] possible, however, by the fact that the postponement fell on a [illegible] no other events are scheduled throughout the country.

No training will be permitted on the track until the morning of the race, and then the men can cut it out for all they are worth.

Of course [illegible] will have to be oiled again in order to safeguard the contestants, and this work will be done late Tuesday night.

Few Entries for Tour.

It really looks as though the Ideal Tour of the Automobile Club of America, which is in some quarters heralded as a national run, is and will prove nothing more than a mere club outing, such for instance as the Bay State Automobile Association has held in the past and which is hoped it will hold in the future. The run starts on Friday next and is through a charming and picturesque section of the country, and yet but sixty-five entries have been received. Those responsible for the publicity end of the tour send out the information that that number of cars are entered, and give the makes of the cars, but not the names of the owners or entrants. The news value of the announcement would be materially enhanced by the publication of the names of the entrants, but still they were not announced. Premature announcements of entrants for the prize race of the club to be held in Savannah on [illegible] caused a denial to be made by the [illegible] said to have made the first entry [illegible] it was learnt that [illegible].

[illegible] It is [illegible] the idea of [illegible] is one that has always appealed to those who tour for pleasure [illegible] has been shown by [illegible] organization when from 100 to [illegible] have participated in a [illegible] and four day run. The run starts on Friday next, the first night stop being Waterbury, Ct., the second Manchester, Vt., the third Sunapee Lake, N. H., the fourth Bretton Woods in the White Mountains, where the [illegible] is to tarry one day; thence to Poland Springs, Me., for the next night, Boston next where one day will be spent, then to Waterbury and home to New York. It is planned to leave New York on the morning of June 19, returning on the 28th.

The route affords the most varied scenery, fair to excellent roads and first class hotels at convenient distances. The hotels will make special rates, offering the best of accommodations at moderate prices. [illegible] for the tour have been made which practically eliminate the dust evil, usually [illegible] where many cars travel together.

Will Be Called Mountain Tour.

The 1908 tour of the American Automobile Association has come to be known as the "mountain tour," as Chairman Hower has so arranged the route that it passes over the Alleghany, the Blue Ridge, the Pocono, the Adirondack, the Catskill, the Berkshire, the White and the Green Mountains. The route of 1,669.7 miles is probably the most beautiful that could have been selected in this country. Last year's tour passed through a portion of the route, that through Pennsylvania and the Path [illegible]. The Catskills were visited by the Mud Larks in that famous rainy tour of [illegible], and the tourists found them so much to admire and talk about that they suggested [illegible] that another tour be taken through that country. The Berkshires and the White Mountains have been included in other tours, as have also the Maine districts surrounding Rangeley Lakes. The present year's tour is a review of the matchless good things found in other tours and promises, according to Secretary Lewis, to be the most pleasant of all the tours. The Sunday at Poland Springs, Me., will be thoroughly enjoyable. The stop-over Sunday at Bedford Springs last year was not a most enjoyable experience.

Aides to Autoists.

The Automobile Legal Association has employed aides, mounted on bicycles, who will patrol Boston and vicinity, uniformed in a white sweater, bearing across the breast the initial letters of the association, viz.: A. L. A., and wearing a white cap. The officers of the association say: "These aides will assist you in case of breakdown or accident; will furnish information regarding local traps and speed or other regulations, and in short, will extend every possible courtesy to automobilists, somewhat after the manner of the Motor Union of England.

"When you see one of these aides standing in the street with a bicycle, ask no questions, but look out for traps ahead."

ACME CO. MADE NO REQUEST

Referring to the statement issued by the Automobile Club of America to the effect that the Acme Company had requested entry blanks for the Grand Prize race to be run at Savannah on Thanksgiving Day and wished to be number one in that race, H. M. Sternbergh, president of the Acme Motor Car Company, of Reading, Pa., says:

"A great mistake has been made in this matter. No telegram of this character or anything which could be interpreted as signifying the intention of this company to enter, at this time, the Grand Prize race has been sent by me to the Automobile Club of America. I have investigated the matter this morning and can find no official or employe of this company at the factory who has sent such a telegram. I have asked the Automobile Club to explain to whom the telegram was sent and how it was signed and when sent."

THESE BABIES LIKE MOTORING

There are many enthusiastic automobilists who have traveled long distances, but there are few younger than the Misses Frances Margaret and Priscilla Alden Henshaw, three years ten months and two years respectively, who intend to surpass all previous long-distance automobile journeys for children. There is hardly a day passes but what they are motoring, and they have covered some ten thousand miles over New England highways, including side trips to the White Mountains, through New York city to Monmouth Beach, N. J., and to Rye Beach, N. H., and return the same day.

These babies have no difficulty in making friends. Children and adults alike are at once won over by their winning, athletic mental and moral ways. Machines on the road are always an attraction to them. With a mouthful of snow-white teeth, easily being able to count from one to seven, climbing up or down stairs, over tops of tables, up pantry drawers to the good things on the shelf, and remembering matters that are told them that would shame a child twice their age, the reporter found them all that could be asked for in American childhood. They do not know what being rocked or carried for quieting purposes means, never having had the experience. They are equally fond of driving behind a horse.

A. B. HANLEY NOW WITH FRANKLIN CO.

A. B. Hanley, one of the best known motor tradesmen in this country, recently appointed acting manager of the local branch of the Franklin Automobile Company, has assumed the duties of that position, having taken up the reins of office during the latter part of last week. Mr. Hanley is by no means a novice or a stranger in the trade. He has been identified with the industry almost since its inception, and has established a reputation for himself which is most enviable. He was for a great many years identified with the Electric Vehicle Company of Hartford and while with that company did much to advance its interests, not in one section of the country alone, but throughout its length and breadth. He has been connected with the Franklin Company for some time back and comes direct from the factory to fill the important local position.

NEW DEMAND FOR GOOD ROADS

A new demand for good roads, more urgent than any preceding, arose with the spread of the automobile, and the indications are that under the banner of this most modern of passenger vehicles all the various tribes of good roads advocates are to be united. Never before has there been a good roads demonstration at which so many different organizations were represented as there will be at the Buffalo convention, to be held under the auspices of the American Automobile Association, July 6, 7, 8. This uniting of forces for the common cause gives a new strength and significance to the good roads movement, and the three days at Buffalo promise to mark a new epoch for the workers in this field.

SIMPLEX CAR'S FINE SHOWING

Among the many announcements sent out as a result of the twenty-seven speed trials held at Jamaica last week, there is one which deserves more than passing comment. This relates to the performance of the Simplex which made a remarkable showing, although it was purely a stock car entered among racing cars of double its horsepower. The Simplex time of thirty-two seconds in a kilometer, fifty-one seconds in a mile, and one minute forty-four seconds in the two miles, stands remarkably close to the time made by Harry Levey's 120 horsepower Vanderbilt cup racer and Christie's freak front driving car. The time made by the Simplex in these three events leads all the American four-cylinder stock cars by an ample margin.

JUDGE'S SON ARRESTED.

"A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," yes, and a motoring son with a chronic lien on the paternal purse for fines induces leniency from the bench, when the parent is a judge. A justice of New Rochelle, N. Y., has been noticeably kind to motorists since his own son was arrested for fast driving. It will come—in one way and another, the time will arrive when motorists will be deemed human and granted fellow sympathy.

AUTO RACES AT ELKWOOD PARK

Handsome Prizes Will Be Offered for Contests There on July 4.

The Elkwood Park Automobile Association, a motor racing body, has been organized at Long Branch for the purpose of holding track races at the old Elkwood track, and plans are on foot for a big track meeting on July 4th. Races will be held at the hundred, twenty-five, ten and five miles, and mile trials will also be upon the program.

The officers of the Association are as follows: President, Charles C. McFadden, Mayor of Long Branch; vice president, [illegible] president, Robert Guggenheim; treasurer, William D. Anderson; secretary, T. Francis Moore. The board of directors includes Fred Lewisohn, Harry Payne Whitney, W. E. D. Stokes, P. J. Casey, Walter Lewisohn and Martin H. Vogel. These gentlemen, all of whom are residents of Long Branch and vicinity, are said to be intensely interested in the track meeting scheduled for Independence Day, and will aim to make it a social function of considerable moment.

It is announced that Robert Guggenheim will present a handsome copper trophy, and that Fred and Walter Lewisohn will offer a cup to be known as the Lewisohn cup, for [illegible] events. In addition there will be trophies for the winners of all the [illegible] events of the day and [illegible] prizes to drivers.

Application has been made for a sanction and entry blanks will be issued within a few days.

MRS. CUNEO WANTS TO RACE

Mrs. Joan N. Cuneo, who has achieved some fame as a driver in large tours and in track races, has instituted a campaign to have the Racing Board A. A. A. remove the embargo on women as race drivers, or at least to have the rule of the board made flexible so as to admit women as drivers at the discretion of race promoters, providing the applicant can give satisfactory evidence of her ability to control a car at speed and of her experience and coolness.

A. A. A. TOUR NOW A HARD CONTEST

When Charles J. Glidden first donated his trophy as a touring prize, he had in mind a pleasure trip, mildly competitive. It was found impracticable to combine contest and comfort, so the character of the A. A. A. tour has been modified, until it is now frankly a stern competition in touring which is supported almost wholly by the manufacturers, and is watched by automobilists everywhere to learn how the cars stand up under strenuous touring conditions. A few enthusiasts enter this event for love of the sport, but it is too arduous for the average clubman, and now that the ambitious A. C. A. of New York has announced an open pleasure tour of a week's duration, there will be a chance for the tonneau seat coterie to join the procession, and all may be happy, if not orthodox.

AUTO COMPANIES CONSOLIDATE

The Wayne and Northern Automobile companies of Detroit have been consolidated into a million dollar corporation, which is to be called the Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company.

The officers of the new company are B. F. Everitt, president; W. T. Barbour, vice president; Charles L. Palms, banker, Detroit, treasurer; Dr. J. B. Book, banker, Detroit; Aubert D. Bennett, banker, Port Huron; William E. Metzger, secretary, and W. E. Flanders.

The active organization, in addition to the president, consists of W. E. Flanders, formerly of the Ford Company, who will act as general manager, [illegible] superintendent, W. E. Metzger, sales manager, and last, but not least, L. LeRoy Pelletier, who will act as advertising manager.

The Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company will have three of the most up-to-date automobile manufacturing plants known to the industry. With these [illegible] W. E. Flanders and his organization will turn out 12,500 cars between [illegible] and September, 1909. The [illegible] a popular thirty horsepower [illegible] in several types. Sample cars [illegible] July 1.

MICHELIN CO. TOOK HONORS

Added to the prestige of three new world's records made at the time trials at Jamaica, the Michelin Tire Company [illegible] of the day, among [illegible] also a Pennsylvania medium [illegible] car equipped with Michelin tires winning handily in its class.

ROW ON RULES OF VANDERBILT RACE

Now A. C. A. May Hold a Similar Contest on the Savannah Course.

It now begins to look as though there will be a clash between the American Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of America, with the conditions of the coming Vanderbilt race as a basis of contention. The automobile authorities of France and England have objected to the rules as now laid out, and have communicated to the A. C. A. their objections to the same, which are that the rules are not in conformity with those adopted at Ostend meeting. The A. C. A. has, in turn, communicated the same to the race committee of the American Automobile Association and without waiting for an official answer thereto its officials have seen fit to go ahead and endeavor to capture the Savannah course for a race similar in character to the Vanderbilt.

The Automobile Club of America, which is a side issue in part and a competitor of the jobbers, has taken unto itself certain things which do not rightfully belong to other organizations than the A. A. A., and [illegible].

[illegible] announcement of the plans of the Automobile Club of America for an International race at Savannah in November under the rules promulgated by the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs [illegible] has precipitated the inevitable conflict between the Automobile Club of America and the American Automobile Association for the control of racing in America. It has [illegible] between the [illegible] National Association on the one hand and the New York club on the other, would eventually result in a struggle between them for the control of racing.

It was not expected, however, that the contest would come so soon. The Savannah announcement, calling forth as it has a declaration of purpose on the part of the Automobile Club to hold a race in opposition to the Vanderbilt Cup race and forcing the American Automobile Association as it will to a declaration of its attitude toward the new race, means the drawing of strict lines of battle. The issue of the fight rests with the American manufacturer, who will decide which body he will support when the time comes, and the fight will be waged to the finish.

OLD TIME CARS USED IN WEST

Where the great number of old cars go to has always been a mystery, but it is partially explained by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, who is on his second Western trip. Mr. Reeves writes:

"I had often wondered what disposition was made of cars made back in 1901, '02 and '03, but, much to my satisfaction, I learned that a great quantity of the old timers are in use in the West, and, better still, they are giving satisfaction. I saw a great many old machines with rear entrances. Some are in the hands of mechanical men who have given them the best of care. There are many 'one lungers' being used for beginners. This simply goes to prove that the foundation of great builders was good."

BUGGYAUT GOOD FOR FARMERS

Charles E. Duryea, one of America's pioneer builders of gasoline vehicles and technical expert of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, writes that this new production, the buggyaut, is meeting with approval among the farmers because of its perfect and easy adaptability to other uses than that of conveyance.

"On every farm there is a demand for power for many purposes," says the A. M. C. M. A.'s expert. "Many farmers have their gasoline engines, but this is usually a heavy affair, and not readily movable as a portable engine is. The buggyaut can run by its own power to any part of the farm and there at once be ready to furnish power for a woodsaw, a pump or a feed grinder. Its extreme simplicity puts it into a new class in respect to the practical work of the farm and it promises to go far toward breaking down the hostility of the farmer toward power vehicles."

RIVAL ROAD RACES.

The rival international races, the Vanderbilt and the Grand Prize, are being exploited with a vehemence unparalleled in motor racing history. Unprejudiced observers are of the opinion that the promoting organizations behind each race will have difficulty in getting entries. As to whether there is room for two big road races of this sort remains to be proved.

WHITE BRANCH IN PITTSBURG

The White Company will open a branch office in Pittsburg on April 1, having secured the new and commodious garage at 138-148 Beatty street, formerly occupied by the Liberty Automobile Company. William B. Yeder will be in charge of the new branch, and his territory will include the western counties of Pennsylvania. The White Steamers, having long been sold in Pittsburg through its agency, are very numerous throughout this section.

The new branch is the eighth to be established by the White Company, the others being located in New York, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, San Francisco, Philadelphia and London. The acquisition of the Pittsburg property by the White Company raises the amount invested by that concern in branch offices, including real estate and equipment, to approximately $2,000,000. In the ownership of branch offices and garages, maintained in order that owners may deal directly with the manufacturer, the White Company is far in the lead as regards the amount of capital thus invested.

FRENCH COMPLAIN OF RACE RULES

Two years ago, the Automobile Club of France refused to make official entries for the Vanderbilt Cup, but the French manufacturers entered independently. Now the French organization complains about the 1908 rules, which do not recognize the weight limits allowed for European racing cars. The complaint was made to the Automobile Club of America, which has nothing to do with the Vanderbilt Cup and is not even a member of the A. A. A., to which the cup was donated. The New York club, through its contest committee and with a petite pomposity, quite characteristic, demands an explanation of the A. A. A. It appears that the only answer to be given is to the effect that "The rules are drawn and the race will go on." The rules of the European bodies were well enough known when the Vanderbilt rules were drawn, and four entries of foreign made cars are assured. The French makers are at a great disadvantage through being in touch with only a local club on racing matters, and not the national governing body in this country, because the rules practically give the American racers an advantage this year.

INTEREST IN TOURS.

The bulk of what might be called the "Spring Schedule" of races, hill-climbs, speed trials and other meetings having passed into history, interest now seems to centre on touring events. The Glidden tour and the recently announced owners' tour to be conducted by the Automobile Club of America and still other tours by the Bay State and similar clubs are looming large on the horizon. A few of the special events, including the Cleveland hill-climb and the interesting Monroe County festival, which includes tours, parades, two hill-climbs and speed trials, yet remain to be run off.

FOREIGN CARS REDUCED.

Present [illegible] tours in foreign cars have placed the imported article on a better competitive basis. Considerable sales of foreign cars for delivery to Americans abroad have been reported. Rather numerous have been the sales of high-priced American cars to people going abroad. On the other hand, the sales of popular-priced cars have been much heavier during the past week. Registrations have increased perceptibly and the weekly average is now running heavier than for the same weeks last year.

MOTORCYCLE DIVISION.

It has been definitely decided by the show committee of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association to have a motorcycle division in the ninth international automobile show at the Grand Central Palace, December 31, 1908, to January 7, 1909. This will make four distinct vehicle divisions, as provision has been made for pleasure, commercial, taxicab and motorcycles.

PLANNING FOR NEXT CHICAGO SHOW

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, left yesterday for Chicago where he has gone to confer with officials of the Chicago Automobile Club and the Chicago Motor Club, regarding the automobile show which the A. M. C. M. A. will conduct in the "Windy City" this coming Winter. It is expected that Mr. Reeves will settle upon a suitable building in which the show will be conducted. Before returning to New York he will visit twelve or fifteen automobile factories.

LOWELL AUTO RACE ON LABOR DAY

Lowell, June 13.—"The big automobile race which we planned for July 4 is off," said J. O. Heinze, chief promoter, to a Boston American representative last night. "While we anticipate no trouble in getting the bill through permitting the races on July 4 or on Labor Day, we shall make no effort to hold them on July 4. There is now no time in which to carry out the arrangements necessary for an event of the magnitude that we had planned. The races will surely be held on Labor Day, and the distance will be 250 miles. Preparations for the races will begin just as soon as the bill goes through the Legislature."

CHURCHILL TO SUCCEED SHANKS

The Winton Motor Carriage Company, of Cleveland, has appointed Charles W. Churchill general sales manager, with headquarters at Cleveland, to succeed Charles B. Shanks, general sales and advertising manager. Mr. Shanks resigned this week to enter the retail business for himself.

Mr. Churchill has been with the Winton Company for several years. When assistant manager of the Cleveland branch he was [illegible] in 1906 to [illegible] New York branch manager, and it is [illegible] the new [illegible].

NINETEEN CARS HAD CLEAN SCORES

Thirty-seven starters, ranging in price from $800 to $4,200, and nineteen perfect finishers, briefly sums up the result of the recent Indianapolis-Anderson-New Castle 150-mile [illegible] endurance run. In the $1,000 and under class there were eight starters, the star performer of which was the $1,000 Reo roadster driven by E. W. Twyman, who negotiated the entire [illegible] high gear, and averaged [illegible] and one half miles per gallon gasoline. This was the only Reo entered in the contest and it finished with a clean [illegible] of health.

MLLE. NOVI'S "DEATH DIP" THE STAR THRILLER ON WONDERLAND PROGRAM

There was no Saturday half holiday for Wonderland attaches yesterday. They were too busy taking care of people who jammed the place from end to end.

Every show had a fine trade and gathered in the money. People kept coming and coming from the time the place opened. By early evening the board walk and the various shows were crowded, so the "ballyhoos" didn't have to work their heads off to get good business.

The two death dips of Mlle. Novi who turns a triple somersault in an automobile were the "thrillers" of the day of course. The general wonder at the end of each among the crowd was that the girl didn't get killed. But she didn't. The announcement that this hair-raising act is held for another week is of interest for those who haven't seen it yet, or who want to see it again, as many do.

The Salem Cadet Band began a four weeks' engagement at Wonderland yesterday, adding to the open air programme. A rattling good free vaudeville show helps entertain the crowd when it isn't busy going from one amusement to another.

MRS. EDDY MAY TAKE PART IN COMMUNION SERVICE TODAY

Fifteen Thousand of The Faithful To Meet For Solemn Service.

SPECIAL MUSIC PROGRAM.

Scientists Come From All Over New England; Message From Aged Leader.

Fifteen thousand Christian Scientists, from all parts of New England, will kneel in silent prayer, and then, in unison, repeat aloud the words of the Lord's Prayer at the communion service in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, this morning and this afternoon. The Scientists will travel long distances in order to be present at the services.

It is possible, although no confirmation would be made by any of the church officers yesterday, that Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy will attend the communion services to-day. If so, she will leave her Newton residence at 9:30 o'clock, and, in company with her private secretary, Calvin A. Frye, will drive through Newton, Brookline, to the Parkway, directly to the Mother Church on Norway street.

Sing Hymn by Founder.

First Reader William D. McCracken will conduct the services and will be assisted by Mrs. Albert Conant, second reader. The communnual hymn, written by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, will be sung in honor of the founder of the faith. The morning service will be held at 10 45 and the afternoon service at 3 o'clock.

The reading platform will be draped with "Old Glory" in honor of the 131st anniversary of the making of the first American flag by Betsy Ross in Philadelphia.

The subject of the lesson of the communion services to-day will be "Works." The golden text will be read by Readers McCracken and Conant. The citations, which comprise the sermon, will be from the Bible and "Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures," by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy.

Annual Meeting Tuesday.

There will be special music and a solo will be rendered by Mrs Helen M. Hunt of the church choir. The unleaven bread and wine communion service, which is observed in other churches, will be omitted by the Scientists to-day and they will observe the communion solely by silent prayer.

At the word of First Reader William D. McCracken, the entire assemblage will kneel for several moments. At the request of Mrs Eddy, simplicity will mark both services.

The annual business meeting of the church society will be held in the directors' room at ten o'clock Tuesday. New officers will be elected and the various reports of the standing committees will be heard.

At the request of Mrs Eddy, the meeting of the executive members, which is usually held on the Saturday before the communion service, was omitted yesterday. The following statement, written by Mrs Eddy, was given out to the press, concerning the meeting:

Sends Out Message.

"My Beloved Brethren—When I asked you to dispense with the executive members' meeting the purpose of my request was sacred. It was to turn your sense of worship from the material to the spiritual, the personal to the impersonal, the denominational to the doctrinal, yea, from the human to the divine.

"Already you have advanced from the audible to the inaudible prayer, from the material to the spiritual communion, from drugs to Deity, and you have been richly recompensed. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for so doth the divine love redeem your body from disease, your being from sensuality, your soul from sense, your life from death. Of this abounding and abiding spiritual understanding the prophet Isaiah said: 'And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them and not forsake them.'"

BEAUTY DOCTOR

ADVISES WOMEN TO DEVELOP

Says The New Method Increases the Bust Measurement and Rounds the Arms and Neck.

(BY CLARA BELLE M.)

"Speaking from my own personal experience and from observation of many whom I have successfully treated in the past two years, I should say that Madame Moneaux really owed her great success as a beauty specialist to the use of a simple preparation which is used exclusively to develop the bust, arms and neck. I became acquainted with this formula and have used it ever since, much to the delight of patrons. I now buy the ingredients in wholesale quantities, although any well stocked drug store can supply them.

"If your bust lacks development or firmness you can rely on both increase and firmness from the persistent use of the following: Obtain of the druggist two ounces of glycerine and one ounce tincture Cadomene, mix and let stand several hours; then add a teaspoonful of borax and three ounces of rosewater. Shake well and apply to the neck, arms and bust, rubbing and massaging until it is completely absorbed; then wash the parts treated with very hot water and soap and dry thoroughly. Apply the treatment morning and night regularly for several weeks or months as the case may require, and the most exquisite firmness and rounding out of hollow places will reward you.

"It is the refreshing fulness and exquisite firmness of the feminine form that attracts, and it is the well developed woman who captivates, charms and retains the affections and endearments of the opposite sex. If you are observing, you know this is true."

KILL 8-HOUR BILL IN CLOSING HOURS

Senators Turn Down Labor Measure After Its Passage Through House.

LEGISLATURE PROROGUED

Horse Play Marks Wind-Up of Session Which Enacted Record Legislation.

After placing on the statute books of the Commonwealth 637 new Acts and 147 new Resolves, the Massachusetts Legislature [illegible] prorogued at 6 45 last evening by Secretary of State William M. Olin. The amount of new legislation enacted establishes a new record in this State.

The final day of the session, from a legislative standpoint, was the most indolent of the entire session. From the standpoint of noise and general hilarity it was the most strenuous.

The closing hours were given over almost entirely to enjoyment of horse-play that would have put a schoolboys' recess to shame. Legislation was forgotten. The legislative documents which have engaged the attention of both the House and Senate for nearly six months were disregarded, except for use as ammunition to be thrown at the "mock session" debaters.

The eight-hour bill of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor was the only serious measure to successfully attract the attention of the members in either branch. This bill provided for an amendment to the eight-hour law, now on the statute books, by prohibiting the "permitting" as well as the "requesting" or "requiring" of more than eight hours of work in one day or forty-eight hours in one week from laborers, workmen and mechanics in the employ of the State.

Tied Up for Months.

The bill had been tied up for several months in the Committee on Labor. The Ways and Means Committee, after considering it, recommended a "next General Court reference. The House, with a display of the pro-labor spirit that has characterized it practically throughout the session, turned down the Ways and Means report and gave the bill its several readings.

The Senate, however, was ready with the axe that has met the Peaceful Picketing Bill, the Unfair Discrimination Bill, the Fifty-Four Hour Bill and the countless other labor measures offered in the upper branch this session. After enjoying for but two short hours the life with which the House had endowed it, the eight hour amendment was sent to the "next General Court."

Senators Norcross and Linehan attempted to stay the death of the measure by a bit of spirited debate without avail.

The year's calendar was practically cleaned up, others measures were being either rushed through their several readings or sent to the next Legislature.

"Next General Court," said the Ways and Means committee.

"Next General Court," echoed the Senate by a vote of 17 to 14, as follows:

Vote of the Senators.

AGAINST ACTION THIS YEAR—Abbott, Dean, Dickinson, Faxon, Galloud, Grimes, Hall, Jenney, Johnson, Keith, Potter, Richmond, Schuster, Shaw, Spaulding, Stevens, Treadway—17.

FOR ACTION THIS YEAR—Butler, Garfield, Hibbard, Linehan, Mahoney, McEttrick, Mitchell, Morse, Salter, Sowle, Turner, Vahey, Wheatley, Williams—14.

Paired: Against action this year—Riley, Fisk, Cowee, Bell; for action this year—Norcross, Dixon, Halley, Monahan.

A motion to reconsider was voted down. The bill was sent over to the House, and the lower branch, recognizing that a controversy was useless so close to final adjournment, agreed to the "next General Court" reference.

The serious matters disposed of, both branches held "mock sessions." The presiding officers, clerks, chaplains and messengers in each branch were presented tokens of esteem, and the members awaited the message from Acting Governor Draper dismissing the session.

Alfred Vanderbilt Worried by Madame Ruiz Divorce Suit

Faces Sensational Publicity in Action Against Woman Involved In Auto Deal.

Mme. Belle Mary Agnes O'Brien-Baudoine-Hilton-Ruiz, whose Cuban husband is suing for divorce, and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, whose name was involved with her's when Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt secured a divorce from him.

New York, June 13.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the London coaching season at an end, comes back to face ever more publicity than he ever had before in the suit for divorce which Senor Antonio Ruiz of the Cuban Legation in Washington brings against his mysterious and beautiful wife, Senora Belle, or Mary Agnes, O'Brien Beaudoine-Hilton. The papers were served upon Madame Ruiz to-day, after she had been hunted high and low for several days.

This is the fifth divorce suit with which the name of Alfred Vanderbilt has been connected within the past two or three years, and all of which have proved very sensational. When the fact of the suit for divorce brought by Senor Ruiz was first known, rumor said that he was to bring a suit for $50,000 against Alfred Vanderbilt for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections. This is denied now.

Wants Divorce—Not Money.

Madame Ruiz was named by Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt in the divorce proceedings which freed her from her husband, the "millionaire coachman," on May 23 last.

Senor Ruiz, at the Waldorf-Astoria today, was angry because of the rumor that he intended to bring an alienation suit against Alfred Vanderbilt or anyone else.

"All I want," he said, as his big dark eyes snapped, "is a divorce from this woman. I wish that I had never seen her. Money would be no compensation to me for all the trouble and distress and this continuous notoriety she has brought me."

The proud Cuban, scion of a wealthy family of Havana to whom he so proudly introduced his winsome bride but six years ago, has ploddingly gone back over the sealed pages of his wife's history and in addition to suing her for divorce declares that he will resign his place with the Cuban legation.

George Young Bauchle, attorney for Senor Ruiz, refuses to reveal the details of the suit or much concerning the grounds upon which the action is based. He admitted the facts to-day to a Boston Sunday American reporter but declared that the formal action had not yet been taken.

Find Her at Villa.

"All I can tell," said Mr Bauchle at his office, No. 38 Park Row, "is that there is a divorce action pending between Mr Ruiz and his wife, and that Mr Ruiz, whose lawyer I am, is the plaintiff. The action is based upon statutory grounds."

"The woman of mystery had flitted away from her apartments in the dingy Post Graduate Nurses' building, No. 590 Lexington avenue, surroundings so different from the fashionable Savoy where she made her home when she first met Alfred Vanderbilt, the all but dethroned head of the Vanderbilt family.

After considerable difficulty Mrs. Ruiz was found in the beautiful villa of a friend near Portchester, twenty-six miles away in Westchester county, on Pelham Bay. She was living in luxury and she nearly always has since she came to New York. She had six horses at the villa, her coachman and footman in her famous green livery and her maid.

The names of Alfred Vanderbilt and Mme. Ruiz have figured in several sensational divorce suits in one way or another and if their names have not been [illegible] mentioned they have been close friends [illegible] the principals on one side or the other.

All Caused by Auto.

So the declaration of Attorney Bauchle that no co-respondent has been named in the divorce papers drawn up and awaiting the finding of Mrs. Ruiz, but that an "unknown man" has been mentioned, is likely to deceive no one.

Every one remembers that Elsie French, armed as she was with her proofs against her husband, did not separate from him nor cause her divorce suit to be filed until Mme. Ruiz paid for the $11,000 automobile which Harry Brenchley, Alfred Vanderbilt's purchasing agent, bought on the eve of his flight from this country with the wife of A. S. Dieterich.

Brenchley told the firm that he was to get the auto for a lady. He didn't pay for it, and when Elsie French Vanderbilt flamed up in anger the machine was sent back to the house from which it was purchased. It was refused and Vanderbilt told he must be responsible. The next day pretty Mrs. Ruiz, purring her regrets for "the oversight," appeared and drew a check for $11,000.

Then Elsie French Vanderbilt left her husband in wrath and humiliation, and the suit was straightaway begun.

Some little [illegible] of romance surrounds the affair for Vanderbilt, and the strange little wife of the Cuban diplomat met under unusual circumstances.

Meet in Central Park.

Central Park was the scene. The pretty woman, dressed as as she well knows how to dress, was riding a spirited young mount. She had sent her groom ahead, as she wished to enjoy her early ride entirely alone. Suddenly, just as her horse broke into a sharp canter, Mrs. Ruiz felt the saddle slip under her. The girth had loosened.

At the same instant Alfred Vanderbilt was driving by with a brake and four. He saw the plight of the pretty woman and, reining in his four as easily as though he were driving but a single horse, vaulted from his seat and ran to her relief.

With a quick, strong hand he controlled the prancing horse. Before he could extend the other hand, Mrs Ruiz, who did not know the firm faced, full lipped young man who was so gallant, sprang lightly to the ground.

"I felt my saddle slipping. You see the stupid thing has turned. My groom has ridden ahead. Oh, thank you, ever so much. I might have come to serious injury had you not been so kind."

As the words fell charmingly from her attractive lips, Vanderbilt adjusted the girth, his eyes and ears meanwhile drinking in sight and sound so pleasant.

Then with mutual bowings and wavings they separated.

Neither knew who the other was until a few short weeks later, when they met at the races in Saratoga. The romantic acquaintance was renewed and was continued until Vanderbilt's departure for Europe. Coincidence or not, they alone know, Mrs. Ruiz sailed at the same time on another boat.

London is a big town, but they met straightaway on the other side of the water and were much together.

Society has heard many rumors since which have been to the effect that Madame Ruiz and Alfred Vanderbilt are great friends. He would never talk about it, and she—well, she never talks at all about either her past, her present or her future.

GREAT TEMPERANCE FETE BEGINS TO-DAY

World's Congress of Prohibition Workers to Celebrate at Saratoga Springs.

OTHER NATIONS ON HAND

Big Growth of the Movement Evidenced by the Large Delegation Sent.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., June 13.—Commencing to-morrow a ten days' World's Temperance Centennial Congress will be [illegible]

The choice of the location for holding the congress of prohibitionists and temperance workers was well made. For, on April 30, 1808, at the little town of Moreau, in Saratoga County, and only a few miles from the present city of Saratoga, the first temperance society of which there is any record was organized.

The moving spirit in the initial organization was Dr. William J. Clark, a practising physician of the neighborhood, whose study and observation of the effect of liquor upon his patients led him to oppose the use of intoxicants in any form.

As a result of his continued and persistent agitation of the matter among his neighbors, a meeting was held by Dr. Clark and some twenty of his neighbors early in the year 1808, and resolutions were adopted against the use of liquor.

Its Great Growth.

From this small beginning in a small village of a sparsely inhabited county in New York in a hundred years the temperance movement has spread over the civilized globe, and is registering mighty gains each succeeding year.

At the present world's congress, which is expected to exceed in point of attendance any political convention ever held in the historic convention hall at Saratoga, delegates from every temperance organization in the world will be present.

For fifteen years past the temperance movement has been gathering velocity and strength in the United States, but its progress has by no means been confined to this continent. While its gains in the Old World have not been so rapid, they have been steady and sure.

In the southern portion of the Union the prohibitionists have almost made a clean sweep, and the result of each succeeding local option election throughout the South indicates that unless a change comes over the people soon most of the States below the Mason and Dixon's line will be solid against the liquor interests.

Gain Is Widespread.

The gain has not been confined alone to the South. In many of the Northern States for instance, Maine and Illinois—the temperance wave has swept along, and the people have, after thorough campaigns, voted against all forms of intoxicants.

At the Saratoga World's Congress delegates who have been appointed by the Governors of the various States and foreign governments will attend. This indicates that the movement, which was scoffed at in the beginning, is attracting the serious attention of the rulers of the world.

The congress will last for ten days, from to-morrow to the 23d of June, during which time every famous temperance orator and advocate will be heard.

The advisory committee and the committee on promotion, which have the convention in charge, consist of delegates from the various States of the Union, as well as from Sweden, Norway, Scotland, Nova Scotia and Hungary.

It has been arranged that in case the convention hall is not large enough to seat the immense crowds which are expected to gather during the several days' proceedings overflow meetings will be held in the several churches in the city.

All of the clergymen and church organizations of Saratoga, without regard to creed, have united to make the convention and congress an epoch in the temperance movement. The business men of the city have joined in and are furnishing material assistance in the arrangements to accommodate the vast number of delegates.

MARINE PERISHED AFTER DISCHARGE

Lowell, June 13.—The body of John Reilly, discharged from U. S. Marine Corps at Boston May 26, was found in East Billerica woods to-night. There are no marks of violence on the corpse, which is badly decomposed. The only clothing on the body were pantaloons, undershirt and drawers. Dr J. V. Meigs, acting medical examiner, will perform an autopsy if necessary. The discharge papers in the pantaloons identified Reilly. He was twenty nine years old.

Market Opens With Slump But Bull Rally Sends Prices Back

London Selling Orders Weaken Stocks and Drop Wipes Out Week's Slight Gains.

RAPID RECOVERY FOLLOWS

Local Market Transactions Dull Until Brisk Advance Stirs Activity.

After another slump in Wall street at the opening of the stock market to-day, during which the prices of all the leading issues declined fractionally below the lowest notch reached on Friday, a recovery was experienced, and at the close of the session net gains had been recorded in most of the list. Erie was among the most notable exceptions. At the end of the day the quotation for the first preferred of that stock showed a loss of 1⅝ points.

London was again a heavy seller due, it was said, to disappointment in Europe generally over the result of the Union Pacific bond sale, and to fear in connection with the fate of the Erie railroad.

Market Tone Becomes Firm.

Execution of the foreign selling orders was accompanied by aggressive action by New York brokers acting for operators here committed to the bear side. That sent prices to a level at which stop [illegible] left by traders who had gone out of town for the week's end were run out [illegible]. The downward movement, however, was ended abruptly. In the last half hour the tone had become firm, and almost all the losses had been recovered.

Persons close to the Harriman interests to-day declared that a plan for the reorganization of the Erie was being contemplated. If it goes through, they added, it will be seen that the Union Pacific and the Erie have been brought into much closer connections.

Wheat and cotton were slightly higher.

Union Pacific Dealings.

Union Pacific, at 142⅞ was an object lesson in the New York market, but it rallied to 144⅜. There was 1⅞ range in St. Paul and ⅝ net gain for the day; Reading dropped to 110¾ and recovered to 112¾, a ⅝ net advance. Amalgamated Copper swung from 65⅞ to 67¼, the latter a ⅛ net rise, and so went the general list down and back briskly. Erie first preferred was off 1⅝ net at the end of the day, at 35.

The general market showed a net rally of a little better than ⅛ for the day, leaving not quite 1⅛ net loss for the week in the "barometer" stocks.

The bank statement shows $4,500,000 larger increase in deposits than in loans, nearly $8,000,000 added to lawful money reserve, over six millions of which counts as gain in the surplus above legal requirements, now well over $53,000,000, the largest at mid-June since 1898.

The local market traded in some 20,000 shares and $21,000 bonds in the two hours, was dull for an hour and one-half and became strong in the last thirty minutes. A rise from 66 to 68⅝ in North Butte was the feature, 2000 shares changing hands.

Trading was dull on the curb.

London's Selling Weakens Market

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Following the decline of from one to two points in the first hour of trading, the stock market recovered in the second hour to-day. Under leadership of Union Pacific and Reading, the rally extended [illegible] two to three points [illegible] low level, wiping [illegible] and establishing [illegible] the day in many issues. [illegible] close was strong and [illegible] best figures for the [illegible]. All stocks shared in [illegible] improvement with the exception of the Erie issues, which [illegible] heavy.

The weakness of the first hour was [illegible] a heavy volume of selling orders sent over by London, accompanied by a low range of prices for American shares there.

The foreign selling was believed [illegible] the keen disappointment in London and Paris over the result of the Union Pacific bond sale and fear in connection with the fate of the Erie.

Wheat and cotton were both higher. On the curb market [illegible] continued heavy.

The bank statement showed [illegible] increase [illegible] reserves of $7,88[illegible].

COLLEGE MAIDS IN MALE ATTIRE! FIE!

Smith Seniors Displayed Fine Physiques in Norse Coats of Mail.

YALE BOYS SAW THEM, TOO

But, Strange to Say, No One Demurred; and They May Give Play Again.

Northampton, June 13.—Wearing the romantic old Norwegian costumes, in which suits of mail played a conspicuous part, the Smith College seniors repeated in the Academy of Music tonight their production of Ibsen's "The Pretenders," in which Miss Margaret Elise Sayward of Dorchester and Miss Margaret Bright of Milwaukee scored particular triumphs in the respective roles of the scheming Bishop Nicholas of Oslo and of Earl Skule, the unsuccessful pretender.

Tonight's performance was for the alumnae and the relatives and friends of the graduates. Special guests were the members of the Yale College cast in the same play, which was given at that college last year.

In Coats of Mail.

The fact that many of the pretty seniors wore male costume in the play, with the closely clinging suits of mail, added interest to the occasion. But the audience was composed practically all of relatives or intimate friends of the girls, so the costume question was accepted without demur.

Miss Margaret Elise Sayward, who played the difficult role of Bishop Nicholas, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sayward of No. 69 Monadnock street, Dorchester. Mr. Sayward is secretary of the Boston Master Builders' Association. The attention of Miss Sayward's friends has been called to the happy coincidence that one of Ibsen's most famous plays is entitled "The Master Builder."

Miss Sayward interpreted the role of the wily scheming bishop with much skill.

Seventy Girls Participate.

Miss Margaret Bright of Milwaukee as Earl Skule showed she had given deep study to the part. Miss Bright is an unusually pretty girl, with splendid physique, which appeared to advantage in the martial costume of the unsuccessful pretender.

The play was unusually well staged and settings and costumes were followed in close detail. Over seventy girls were on the stage at times in the play. The light from the stage lamps shone on swords, spears, shields and chain mail, on the embroidered robes of priests and on the varied garb of the peasantry.

The principals were:

Haakon Haakonsson, the king elected—Marion McLennan of Syracuse, N. Y.
Earl Skule, the unsuccessful pretender—Miss Margaret Bright of Milwaukee.
Bishop Nicholas of Oslo—Miss Margaret Elise Sayward of Dorchester.
Margrete—Miss Helen L. Appleton of Brooklyn.
Lady Ragnhild—Ruth Leigh O'Donnel of Buffalo.
Sigrid—Miss Gertrude McMahon of Bridgeport, Ct.
Inga of Varteig—Elizabeth Parker of Portland, Oregon.
Paul Flida—Louise Keyes of Minneapolis.
Gregorious Jonsson—Adeline P. Hill of East Orange, N. J.
Jargeir Skala—Elizabeth E. Fitzgerald of New York.

BATTLESHIP RAMS BRITISH LINER

The collision was so violent that the Vengeance lost her gunports and torpedo booms.

CONTINUES AT NAVY YARD.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 13.—Chief Carpenter Joseph F. Fletcher, U. S. N., recently placed on the retired list, has been ordered by the Secretary of the Navy to continue in his present line of duty in the department of construction and repair at the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

STRANGE BALLOON SEEN OVER AZORES

Mysterious Airship Seemed to Be Held Under Perfect Control by Occupants.

Horta, Fayal, Azores, June 13.—A report from the Island of Flores declares that a balloon evidently under human control passed over that island on June 6 at 8 a. m., traveling from the east to the west. The balloon rose to pass over the island and then came down to its previous level as soon as it was clear of the western shore. The passage of the airship created much excitement.

The Island of Flores is one of the northwest group of the Azores. It is about 800 miles due west of Lisbon, Portugal.

There is no record of any balloon missing in Europe.

GIRLS' CLUB PUTS BAN ON AFFINITIES

And Jacqueminots Must Walk Barefooted in Dewy Grass at Dawn.

AND SWIM A WHOLE MILE

And Some of the Other Girls Are Saying "Silly" Because They Can't Join.

In the organization of the Jacqueminot Club the South Boston Summer girl has walked right in—barefoot at that, and stirred up such a rumpus as never before was seen in that lively peninsula.

Girls who are not eligible to the Jacqueminots are saying "Silly!"

The young men are all "agin" the Jacqueminot idea. Why wouldn't they be when the constitution of the club contains an anti-affinity plank that is more forcible than the Taft steam roller at Chicago.

The general sentiment of the South Boston lads about the Jacqueminot non-flirtation scheme can be summed up in the word "Umpff!"

Here are some of the requirements for the Jacqueminot girl:

She must live in South Boston.

She must be willing to get up at 4 a. m. and walk barefooted in the dewy grass for her health.

She must be able to swim a mile in salt water.

She must be able to get a good coat of tan in one week at the seashore.

And

She must have neither affinity, sweetheart, husband nor [illegible].

Icy-Hearted Jacqueminot.

The last requirement is what gets the goat of the South Boston lads. They can't see where they fit with the fair Jacqueminots. No calling for them at the Jacqueminot lodge. No taking the girls out boating or bathing or dancing or dabbing or walking. Not even a mild little flirtation on the Jacqueminot piazza. Not even a cosy little swinging in the cottage hammock with an icy-hearted Jacqueminot.

No wonder the boys say "Jacqueminot? Umpff!"

And all the girls who cannot swim a mile or who can't or [illegible] walk barefooted in the 4 o'clock grass or who can't tan up easily are scoffing with scorn at the Jacqueminots.

But the Jacqueminots are tickled to death with themselves and their club and their plans, and they say the boys can sit on the beach and hold hands with themselves if they want to, but they can't hold hands with the Jacqueminots. How do they know? Because the constitution says so. And none of the Jacqueminots would be unconstitutional. Not for a minute.

Gymnasium at Cottage.

The club is the result of a wish among several pretty South Boston maidens to get up some physical culture club. They met at the home of Miss May Keeley of No. 21 Gates street. She is a member of St. Augustine's parish, has appeared in the parish Temperance Society's minstrel shows, is a teacher in St. Augustine's Sunday School and belongs to the Young Ladies' Sodality.

Well, the girls met at her home, effected a [illegible] organization and elected Miss Keeley president. Then they chose these other officers: Vice presidents, Mary Higgins and Mollie Tonry; secretary, Josephine Callahan; treasurer, Annie L. Moore; guards, Margaret and Teresa Dunlap.

Then there was the question of a name. Every girl had a different choice. After considerable argument they selected Jacqueminot, which suited most every one. They also voted to hire a cottage at Manomet, near Plymouth, for the season.

The cottage is to be prettily decorated. One room is to be the gymnasium, fitted with swings, flying rings, trapeze and other gymnastic equipment.

At Manomet the Jacqueminots will [illegible] the club regulations. Morning walks with barefeet, daily swims, gymnastic exercises and plenty of [illegible] will be in order when the girls assemble at the cottage early in July.

Must Banish Sentiment.

Candidates for membership now will have to declare their willingness to go in for physical culture and to give up all sentimental flirtation and young men callers. Having sworn to this, they will be taken to Lester's bath for a swimming trial. If they fail in this they cannot be Jacqueminots.

About this time all the South Boston fellows are anxiously querying their best girls to see if they are thinking of trying for the Jacqueminot club.

"To many a girl it's a problem as it means choosing between the club and their sweethearts for the Summer.

15,000 CHILDREN IN TEMPERANCE PARADE

Fifteen thousand children connected with the Holy Family Temperance League of the Catholic churches of Boston will parade through the principal streets of the South End Sunday afternoon, June 28, in honor of the feast of St. John, the patron saint of [illegible]. The parade will end at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, where a sermon will be preached by Rev. George Pat[illegible]

Major John J. Leonard of the Eighth Regiment has been chosen chief marshal of the parade. He has chosen as his assistants John T. Shea of Cambridge and Thomas F. P[illegible] of Roxbury.

DEFENDANTS FREED IN CAPITOL GRAFT

Thirty-three Days Trial in Harrisburg, Pa., Ends in Defeat for State.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 13.—The jury in the Capitol graft cases ended the thirty-three days' trial today by acquitting all the defendants—ex-Treasurer Mathues, ex-Superintendent Shumaker, ex-Auditor-General Snyder, H. Burd Cassel, president of the Pennsylvania Construction Company, and J. M. Huston, the architect of the Capitol. Judge Kunkel had ordered the acquittal of the first three.

The jury placed the costs on the Commonwealth, contrary to the instructions of the judge, who ordered them placed on the defendants. James F. Walter, the prosecutor for the county. Sent back by Judge Kunkel, they disposed of the costs on the prosecutor.

ALL FIRE FIGHTERS AT PROVINCETOWN

The recent fire in Provincetown, which destroyed the great landmark of that part of the Cape, the Centenary Methodist Church, calls renewed attention to the excellent arrangements for fighting fire in that far seagirt town. Provincetown people realize that, were a fire once to gain headway in their town, they would be forced to fight it unaided. They have, therefore, an excellent water service and an organized paid fire department of 200 members. The volunteer fire department comprises 4,000 members of all ages and both sexes. Churches, schools, dwellings, stores, fish wharves are all instantly deserted at an alarm of fire. The entire populace rises up and crushes out the conflagration. This is one of the notable features of quaint Provincetown, to which steamer Cape Cod makes daily trips, leaving No. 400 Atlantic avenue at 9 in the morning.

FRUSTRATE PLOTS TO SLAY CZAR AND KAISER

Woman Chosen by Terrorists to Kill Nicholas Hurls Self Under Train.

BOMB THROWERS TRAPPED

Vienna Police Capture Two Women in Act of Attempting William's Life.

Reval, June 13.—Despite the extraordinary precautions taken to protect the Czar, His Majesty had a narrow escape from assassination here. A Terrorist plot was organized by revolutionaries, which would have been successful but for the refusal of a woman, appointed as executioner, to do the work.

This woman, who was a school teacher, committed suicide by throwing herself in front of a train two days before the Czar arrived from [illegible].

She joined the revolutionists long ago. When it became known that the Czar would come to Reval to meet King Edward the Terrorists summoned this teacher to prove her loyalty by assassinating the Czar.

Vienna, June 13.—A plot to take the life of the Kaiser was frustrated here during his recent jubilee visit to the Emperor Francis Joseph.

While he was driving to Schoenbrunn Castle two women were noticed attempting to take something from a bag they had with them.

Alert police officers saw their strange actions, and sprang at them. They were just in time to prevent the pair from accomplishing their purpose of hurling a bomb at the Emperor.

The Kaiser was deeply disturbed when told of his narrow escape.

The police have been unable to learn whether the women are associated with any organization of Terrorists.

RUSSIA BUILDS UP ATLANTIC TRADE

Government Contracts for Four Twin-Screw Liners to Ply to New York.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 13.—As the Russian government is desirous of building up the commercial relations between Russia and the United States, it has given orders to Barclay, Curley & Company, of Scotland, for the building of four twin screw express steamers, the first of which, the "Russia," has just been put in service. The "Russia" was launched this year at Glasgow, having been built for the purpose of competing with the best steamers between Rotterdam and New York and Libau and New York.

The "Russia" has a displacement of 16,000 tons, quadruple expansion engines of the latest type, developing a speed of seventeen miles an hour. The boat is gracefully, but stoutly, built so as to withstand the roughest seas. It has a double bottom and many watertight compartments.

Besides first and second cabins, the steamer carries a special class, called "improved," for people wishing to enjoy certain privileges and comforts without a very large expense. The third class arrangement is in accordance with the United States immigration laws and it is equipped with all modern appliances as to sanitation, ventilation, heating and the comfort of passengers.

CHILI WANTS TO BUY PROVINCES

Offers $15,000,000 for Tacna and Arica, Now Held by Peruvians.

Valparaiso, Chili, June 13.—The Chilian government, desiring to settle the pending controversy with Peru regarding the nationality of Tacna and Arica provinces, has proposed the following as a basis of arrangement:

First, a commercial treaty embodying mutual concessions; second, the granting of a subvention to the Rapid Steamship Line; third, the construction of the Pan American Railroad, according to the resolutions adopted at the Mexico and Rio de Janeiro conferences; fourth, the convocation of a plebiscite to definitely determine the nationality of Tacna and Arica provinces, all residents, including foreigners, to vote; fifth, the nation retaining the provinces to pay the other two or three million pounds sterling.

According to the Chilian proposal, all or none of the foregoing articles must be accepted.

NEW YORK SINGERS TO FIGHT VIENNA RULES

Bonci and Fellow Artists See Lawyer to Protect Rights.

Vienna, June 13.—Bonci and fellow artists, singing at the Imperial Opera House, are confronted by a set of rules and regulations to which, according to the contracts, they must submit or be fined a very considerable part of their salary. The contracts read that singers in the Imperial Opera House agree to submit to the existing house laws and "those that may be added from time to time, within the pleasure of the manager."

Bonci consulted a lawyer and was told that the latter clause of the agreement had no standing in law. "Even officers of the Imperial House had no right to ask employes to agree to regulations not yet formulated."

KAISER TO GREET SAGAN AND ANNA

German Court Will Welcome Titled Pair, the Prince Is Informed.

Special Cable to Boston American.

Paris, June 13.—Prince Helie De Sagan was semi-officially informed to-day, through an attache of the German embassy in Paris, that he and his future American bride, Madame Anna Gould, would be warmly welcomed in Germany and could count upon a friendly and even sympathetic reception from the Kaiser and royal family. This imperial invitation has deranged the plans for the marriage.

Prince De Sagan has quite given up any hope that the Pope will intercede. If he does not hear from Rome by Monday the Prince will turn Protestant. He announced that in any case marriage will not take place in Paris. He had expected to be married in England, but this invitation from the Kaiser has led him to decide to have the ceremony performed in Germany. The date has not been settled and will not be until the arrival of George Gould, but will certainly take place during this month.

FAMOUS VENICE TOWER INSECURE

Venice, June 13.—The Campanile of Santo Stefano Church, a Gothic structure of the fourteenth century, which contains the tomb of the Doge Francesco Morosini, threatens to fall. The question of demolishing it is under consideration.

"HOLY FOREST" OF OLD GERMANY DISCOVERED

Every Famous Warrior King and Chief Was Buried There.

Frankfurt, Brandenburg, June 13.—German antiquarians who have investigated the prehistoric cemeteries lately unearthed between Furstenwalde and the Rauen Mountains declare that at last the "Holy Forest" of the ancient Germans has been discovered. This "Holy Forest," according to old writers, was "sacred to the g[illegible]" and every famous warrior, king and chief was buried there.

Investigation proved, to the satisfaction of the learned men, that the cemeteries covering an immense area have been in use from 1,000 to 1,200 years. Some of the articles found belong to the Stone Age, the more recent to the Bronze Age.

SUICIDE ON LINER.

Queenstown, June 13.—The White Star line steamship Arabic, from Liverpool on her way to New York, reports the suicide of W. J. Robinson, one of her passengers. Robinson was a cattle foreman of the White Star line, and resided in New York.

ELOPING PRINCESS BARRED FROM HER AUSTRIAN HOME.

Amelie Von Fuerstenberg, Who Ran Away with Chauffeur, Practically Exiled.

TO WED IN SWITZERLAND

Mother Indignant at Daughter's Escapade, Casts Her Off, Although Family Forgives.

Special Cable to Boston American.

Lucerne, June 13.—The marriage of the runaway Princess Amelie Von Fuerstenberg and her companion in elopement, Gustave Kocian, ex-lieutenant and automobile demonstrator, will take place shortly in this romantic Swiss town. Both elopers are now in Carlsruhe, to which place the Princess preceded Kocian in order to be present at a meeting of her high born relatives.

At this meeting the Princess took such a firm stand regarding her intention to marry Kocian that all her relatives, with the exception of her mother, even [illegible] gave their formal consent to the [illegible] provided the pair agreed to reside [illegible] Austria.

In a short interview the Princess [illegible] "I was determined from the first [illegible] mount every obstacle to my marriage with Gustave. Pray do not think my decision was sudden, for I reflected on the step [illegible] many months. Having decided, however, I was determined not to change my [illegible] come what might. I think I shall be very happy."

Kocian was awaiting the Princess [illegible] at Lucerne with his mother when [illegible] received word of the formal consent [illegible] the Princess's brothers and left [illegible] for Carlsruhe. The Princess has reserved apartments at the Hotel Victoria here and the return of herself and [illegible] is shortly expected. The mother of the Princess is still bitter over the elopement, continues to withhold her sanction of the marriage and has stopped correspondence with her self willed daughter.

It was the Princess herself who gave the clue to her whereabouts, and the detectives who were put on the trail of the elopers were absolutely baffled. The police traced the fugitives to Mannheim, thence to Antwerp and thence to Berlin, where the scent was lost. Then her relatives received a letter with a Swiss postmark and the rest was easy.

Of Ancient Family.

Princess Amalie von Fuerstenberg belongs to a very old and distinguished family. The house of Fuerstenberg traces its descent to the time of Charlemagne and can prove an actual unbroken lineage as far back as 1136.

The head of the family acquired the title of Landgrave in 1283, and the territories held by various branches of the family comprise portions of Prussia, Baden, Wurtemberg and Austria. The principal seat of the family is at Donaueschingen, near the sources of the Danube.

Princess Amalie is the younger sister of Prince Emile of Fuerstenberg Konigshof, who succeeded to the Black Forest estate and to the titles of "Hochgeboren" and "Durchlaut" on the death of Prince Karl, the head of the Swabian branch. None of the four branches of the family, those of Swabia, Purglitz, Konigshof and Weitra, now exercises sovereign rights, as they were mediatised by the Congress of Vienna, but all are closely related to the reigning houses of Germany.

MRS. VAN WYCK HEADS NEW CULT

Americans in Paris Take Up Philosophies of the Vedantists.

Special to the Boston American.

Paris, June 13.—Mrs. Robert A. Van Wyck, wife of Greater New York's first mayor, has at last succeeded in establishing a Paris branch of the Vedanta society. The Swami Abhedananda, who is head of this cult, came over specially from London to explain to Mrs. Van Wyck's guests at the Hotel Continental the philosophy and doctrine of the Vedantists.

The Swami's lecture was given in English, and the audience was largely made up of Americans, including the Countess Castelmenardo, who is a daughter of Judge Munroe of New York; Mrs. Edwin Hoff, Mrs. Hugh Reid Griffin and Mrs. Bingham.

In all nearly fifty Americans enrolled themselves in the new society for the study of Vedanta philosophy and morals. Mrs. Van Wyck, in the absence of the Swami, will be the official head of the cult in Paris.

Paris, June 13.—After having considered various places, Wilbur Wright, the Dayton, O., aeroplanist, and Hart O. Berg, the European representative of the Wright Brothers, have finally selected the race course at Man's for the approaching demonstrations of the Wright aeroplane.

A lease of the course has been taken, and the installation of the shed and other accessories probably will require a month. The course measures 800 by 800 yards.

MEAT CAUSES HEART TROUBLE, SAYS EXPERT

German Army Surgeon Supports the Contention of French Physician.

Munich, June 13.—Dr. Wolfhugel, an army surgeon of note, has collected statistics indorsing the figures furnished by Huchard, the French expert on heart diseases, who recently declared that meat eating was responsible for heart disease in a majority of cases.

The Bavarian doctor fortified his case by investigating the cause of mortality and disease among butchers. He found that the number of butchers dying from heart disease is about twice that of every other class of tradesmen.

MY LADY MARJORIE MANNERS TO WED PRINCE AT LAST.

Betrothal to Arthur of [illegible]naught to Be Ann[illegible] by End of Sea[illegible]

DUKE IN A BAD TEMPER

King's Military Brother to Give Up His Ridic[illegible] Position in Malta.

Special Cable to Boston American.

L[illegible], June 13.—The [illegible] more largely in the p[illegible]

In the first place the D[illegible] brother of the King has retu[illegible] [illegible] with the Duchess [illegible] very bad temper and thoroughly d[illegible] with his absurd job as c[illegible] chief of the Mediterranean for[illegible]

In the second place, Prince A[illegible] Lady Marjorie Manners have b[illegible] all opposition with a persistency that has won all classes of society and it can be stated that the announcement of th[illegible] desired betrothal will be made bef[illegible] end of the season.

There really [illegible] no reason fo[illegible] to the engagement, save [illegible]

Lady Marjorie is twenty-five [illegible] age and is accounted one of the prettiest women of the aristocracy, her fat[illegible] Duke of Rutland, is one of the [illegible] nobles of England and has half [illegible] country seats, a magnificent town [illegible] and is wealthy almost beyond av[illegible]

Poverty Only Obstacle.

On the other hand, Prince Arthur, though dashing in appearance and a thorough sportsman, is as poor as [illegible]

His father and the King have for a long while been looking around for some satisfactory girl for him to marry. Various [illegible] Princesses and Highnesses were selected, but Prince Arthur has manifested a will of his own, and if his royal parents and relatives opposed [illegible] he has been equally determined to oppose this.

It may also be stated that Prince Arthur, who is now in his twenty fifth year, will upon his marriage have York House allotted to him as his town residence. It is also planned to have him transferred from his father's staff and give him some soft post at the War Office.

Dislikes His Malta Post.

So far as his personal affairs go, the Duke of Connaught hates his Mediterranean post and is determined to have a more dignified and useful job or know the reason why.

As a way out of the difficulty, the King has suggested sending the Duke to India to succeed Lord Kitchener, but the Liberal Government will not accede to this plan, and just what is to be done with the royal Duke is a question that is agitating army and royal circles.

The Duke, who is a poor man, is intensely [illegible] in the military line. When Lord Roberts retired from the post of commander-in-chief of the British army he did so to make room for the Duke of Connaught, and the Tory government of the day, yielding to the pressure of the King, made the Duke commander in chief under the title of Inspector General.

With the incoming Liberal government the King was bluntly told that the Duke must resign from the Inspector Generalship.

Create Job for Duke.

At first the King refused to listen to the suggestion [illegible] Premier made his argument so strong against having a royal Duke at the head of the army that the Duke made way for General French, an efficient military man, and so a new job was created—commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean forces—and a year ago Connaught sailed for Malta to take up his command.

He now realizes that the creation of the post had no excuse save to give him a job. The Duke, who takes his soldiering seriously, has [illegible] demanded that he be given [illegible] with actual responsibility.

The [illegible] to send him to India to replace Lord Kitchener will not be tolerated for a moment by the present Liberal government. The government realizes at last that conditions in India are precarious and that they must have in command there a man of action and one competent to handle the situation.

The difficulties of satisfactorily placing the Duke in some position suitable to his rank and desires are expected to give Mr. Asquith, the Premier, more trouble than even some of the legislative problems that he will be obliged to solve.

ECCENTRIC SCULPTOR DENUDES DINING ROOM

Only Ornament Rodin Has Left Is Small Broken Statue.

Paris, June 13.—Rodin, the famous sculptor, and vice-president of the National Society of Fine Arts, has remodelled the dining room in his famous villa [illegible], Meudon, by removing every bit of decoration save a small broken statue standing in the centre of the dining table, opposite Rodin's chair.

The statue represents the torso of a female figure, "a girl all a-tremble," as Rodin describes it, and he values the piece of sculpture, dating from the fourth century, as an example of the "purest style of the best period of art." During his meals he seldom takes his eyes off the girl "all a-tremble," minding neither his family nor his guests.

Prague, June 13.—Madame Justine Gollnik, the widow of a well-to-do farmer, sent to Emperor Francis Joseph two months ago a group picture of her ten boys, all of them strapping soldiers, belonging to different regiments of the Imperial Army.

She has just received as acknowledgment a letter from the Emperor's secretary congratulating the mother and wishing her a happy and successful old age. With the letter came a box marked "Imperial Porcelain Factory," and in it was a large coffee cup and saucer, especially made for the Widow Gollnik.

MOB SACKS GHETTO, 3 KILLED, 40 HURT

Russian Village of Dorbian Scene of Massacre and Pillaging.

Berlin, June 13.—A report reached here to-day from the German frontier that a terrible massacre of Jews had taken place at Dorbian, a small Russian village.

Three were killed, two score wounded, eighty houses burned and two synagogues ransacked in the ghetto, according to the meagre information so far at hand. A demand has been made upon the Russian authorities to protect the citizens by prominent Hebrews.

Hundreds of armed Russians surged into the ghetto, shooting and maiming those who did not flee. The police, either through fear or because they sympathized with the movement, made no effort to hinder the invaders. Hundreds of Jews are to-day wandering about [illegible] vicinity of the village, afraid to r[illegible] their homes.

Mr. Hill arrived here yesterday. He has taken apartments in the Hotel Adlon, which were occupied for nearly a year by Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador, pending the reconstruction of the French Embassy building.

Dr. Hill called on the Foreign Secretary, Herr von Schoen, soon after his arrival and arranged to be received by the Imperial Chancellor, Prince von Buelow, at noon to-morrow. Emperor William will grant the new ambassador an audience directly after that.

POLICE REMAIN LENIENT

Decide Not to Risk Battle With Excited Host of Would-Be Voters.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, June 13.—The biggest demonstration yet planned by the suffragettes of the British Isles took place this afternoon in Albert Hall, when nearly 20,000 women gathered, representing every section of Great Britain.

A procession was formed at Thames embankment and the parade marched to the hall, while the line of march was thronged with cheering thousand. Extra police were stationed and several arrests were made, but so widespread was the sympathy that outbreaks were overlooked which would have warranted arrests at other times.

Americans Leaders.

Bands played, 1,000 baners waved in the air and the women cheered incessantly. The greatest excitement attended the demonstration, and the speeches which were delivered were emphatic in declarations of the attitude of the leaders.

Dr. Anna Shaw and Miss Lucy J. Anthony, two delegates from the United States, took an active part and were among the foremost in the line.

The original programme was that Millicent Garrett Fawcett, LL. D., widow of the late Right Honorable Henry Fawcett, was to lead the procession, but this was changed at the last minute.

Others well known in the parade were Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCullough of Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Medley.

Beatrice Harraden, the famous novelist, was another who took part. Another was Sarah Grand.

3000 Barmaids Join Ranks.

Three thousand barmaids took advantage of the suffragettes' parade to have a demonstration of their own to protest against the licensing bill. They met at Trafalgar square and voiced their opposition in speeches, jeers and harangues.

Dr. Anna Shaw, after the meeting, started for Amsterdam to attend the international suffrage conference, which begins Monday. Before leaving she said:

"The meeting to-day in Albert Hall was the greatest I ever saw and I was deeply impressed by it. The orderliness and representative character of the participants was wonderful. It certainly looks as though England were leading the way in trying to get justice for women."

Toward the close of the meeting occurred the only disturbance of the day.

Lady Somerset was speaking. She was attacking the rowdy methods that some of the more ardent suffragettes engaged in at some of their demonstrations, when some of those she was aiming at began to hiss her.

Lady Somerset protested against this interruption of an otherwise harmonious meeting and order was quickly restored.

All Classes Mingle.

Dr. Shaw, Miss Anthony, Mrs. Katherine Waugh McCullough, Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Medley, all of the United States, were given carriages in the front of the parade.

As the parade moved toward Albert Hall the cries of "votes for women" rent the air. Nearly a thousand banners were carried on which the names of noted women appeared. Mrs. Raymond Maud, daughter of Jennie Lind, carried one of the banners.

Representatives from all the British Colonies and a dozen foreign countries took part, and in the vast crowd were wives of peers, professional women and social leaders, mingling with stenographers, shop-girls and domestics.

The principal speakers at the meeting were Dr. Shaw, Mrs. Henry Fawcett and Lady Somerset.

PICTURE SHOWS MARKS MADE AFTER TAKEN

Effect of Illness Which Occurred After Sitting in Negative.

Berlin, June 13.—A curious photographic fact has come to light.

Two months ago a lady of the Court had her picture taken at a leading photographer's, promising a large order in case it was a good likeness. In developing the plate the photographer discovered a large number of spots on the face and shoulders of the subject. He did not finish the pictures, and was rather glad that his customer did not call for them as promised.

She did call, however, a few days ago, showing a badly pock-marked face and proving that she had incipient smallpox, though the effects were indiscernible to the eye, when she sat for the picture. She fell ill the day after her visit to the gallery.

1,000 BRITONS IN BERLIN.

BLOUNT'S $450,000 BEQUEST TO YALE PUZZLES HIS RELATIVES.

The Will of English Gentleman Arouses More Interest Than He Did Living.

QUESTION UNANSWERABLE

Special Correspondence to Boston American.

London, June 13.—Why did Archibald Henry Blount leave $450,000, practically his entire fortune, to Yale University? That is the puzzling question that, after months of investigation by the officials of the fortunate seat of learning and by the disappointed relatives of the deceased, remains unanswered.

[illegible]

What [illegible] to the New Haven college to an obsession inducing [illegible] in the [illegible] pleasures [illegible] which had been [illegible] for years to dwell [illegible] of the very [illegible] ing the [illegible] and pursues [illegible] tion of [illegible] every [illegible] be saved [illegible] faction?

Blount's Friends Few.

Archibald Henry Blount, English gentleman, descendant of an old Buckingham shire family, by his strange and unexplainable bequest aroused more interest after death than he ever did during life.

Like many Englishmen of his class [illegible] habits of [illegible] had no friends. At his club, [illegible] and exclusive Junior Athenaeum in Pall Mall, which he made his town [illegible] for over [illegible] years, he was an isolated person. [illegible] servants [illegible] that he had a certain routine of life, insisted upon being called early, had [illegible] at regular times, and above all did not wish to be bothered by companionship.

At his country place, Gerrard's Cross, in Buckinghamshire, he maintained the same scheme of isolation. His nearest neighbors knew that he was Mr. Blount, and that was all.

His nearest relatives, a sister and a brother, had not either seen or spoken with him for over twenty-five years—not that any unfriendliness existed between them, but simply in true English style they respected his desires to be left alone.

Letter to Yale in 1898.

In 1898 Yale University first learned of the existence of Archibald Henry Blount through a letter which he sent to the president tersely asking the names of the trustees or if possible the university's London lawyers, as he contemplated drawing a will in which Yale would be remembered. The names of the trustees were forwarded to the Junior Athenaeum Club, and within a few days the Yale officials received a copy of Mr. Blount's will bequeathing the bulk of his estate, which was then estimated at $350,000, to the university. In the instrument several London hospitals were also named as beneficiaries for substantial amounts.

Nothing more was heard of Mr. Blount at Yale until the first of June, 1907, when a revised copy of a will written in Mr. Blount's own handwriting was received at New Haven. In this document the bequests to the London hospitals were eliminated, and all the property, consisting of shares [illegible] was bequeathed (with the exception of a few minor personal legacies) to the university.

The document had scarcely been received and acknowledged by the New Haven authorities when Mr. Blount's death was announced as having taken place in a West End hospital on June 17, 1907.

Judge Stoddard of Yale at once came to England and engaged J. Arthur Barrett, who enjoys a rare distinction of being both an American lawyer and English barrister. Investigation revealed that during the last year of his life Mr. Blount had become possessed of an overpowering fear that his estate would diminish and that Yale would not benefit by his death to the extent he desired.

Lived as a Recluse.

He immediately began to live the life of a recluse and miser. He sold his country place at Gerrards Cross, gave up his club entirely and took inexpensive lodgings in the West End.

He denied himself every luxury and almost every comfort. With a penuriousness that his landlady ascribed to poverty he begrudged every extra scuttle of coal to heat his lodgings and became so miserly that even the purchase of papers was regarded as an extravagance.

When the illness that finally resulted in his death—Bright's disease—progressed to that stage that confinement to bed was imperative, Mr. Blount with reluctance permitted a doctor to be called. He told the eminent Curzon street specialist a harrowing tale of poverty, and the tender hearted physician chopped down his fee from $10 a visit to one-quarter that amount, and later, in calling a consultation of other specialists in the case, bore the charges of the confreres himself.

At the consultation the verdict of removal to a private hospital was pronounced, but Mr. Blount declined to be moved until the physician had arranged that the charge for his attention should, on account of his alleged poverty, be reduced to half.

At the hospital he played upon the sympathy of his nurse to such effect that it is reported she begged fruit for "poor Mr. Blount" from the other patients.

The spectacle of an English gentleman, a man of good family and connections, dying in supposed poverty, strongly appealed to doctors, nurses and landlady, and they made his dying hours easier by many delicacies and attentions.

Within a short time Yale University will be in receipt of nearly half a million dollars, but the question why did Mr. Blount make the bequest remains unanswered.

It has cured thousands of cases of eczema and eradicated facial and other disfigurements of years' standing. The terrible itching attending eczema is stopped with the first application, giving proof of its curative properties at the very outset.

In less serious skin affections, such as pimples, rash, herpes, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, etc., results show after an overnight application, only a small quantity being required to effect a cure. Those who use poslam for these minor [illegible] can now avail themselves of the special 50-cent package, recently adopted to meet such needs. Both the 50-cent package and the regular $2 jar may now be obtained in Boston at Houghton & Dutton's, Riker-Jaynes, and other leading drug stores.

Samples for experimental purposes may be had free of charge by writing direct to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City.

DUKE SOBS FOR JOY WHEN SON IS BORN

Arrival of an Heir in House of Norfolk Causes Great Rejoicing.

A LONG CHERISHED HOPE

Idiocy and Death of Only Child by First Wife Had Weighed Heavily on the Earl.

London, June 13.—Not even the birth of a royal baby has caused more interest and rejoicing than the arrival of a son and heir at Arundel Castle, the feudal stronghold in Sussex which has been the home of the Dukes of Norfolk for many centuries. The baby's father, the fifteenth Duke of Norfolk, premier peer and Earl Marshal of England, has been overwhelmed with congratulations, especially from Catholics, for he is the recognized lay leader of the church in England.

Some interesting details have been learned concerning the manner in which the Duke received the glad tidings from the nurse. The Duke was so overcome with joy that he actually sobbed. Then without a hat he flew out of the castle to the magnificent Cathedral, which he has built in the village, and there he knelt in prayer. The senior priest of the Cathedral at once ordered all the bells to be rung and so the news spread for miles throughout the countryside.

Fills Long Cherished Hope.

The infant Earl of Arundale is, indeed, a very important person. His arrival fulfils the hope of an elderly Duke for a son to whom he could hand down the historic title. The Duke of Norfolk has waited many years for a son and heir. The only child of his first marriage died in 1902, at the age of twenty-three, a hopeless idiot and cripple. The first Duchess died of grief when her son was eight years old.

After the death of his son, the Duke married the Hon. Gwendolen Constable-Maxwell, daughter and heiress to Lord Herries—a young and beautiful woman of his own faith. Their union was blessed in 1905 by the birth of a daughter; and now both have been made perfectly happy by the birth of a healthy little Earl of Arundel.

A Curious Feudal Fact.

Although the Duke of Norfolk is the owner of one of the proudest titles in England, and one of the wealthiest peers, his chief characteristics are those of a simple-minded, kindly man of business who is indifferent to society and the conventions—especially those of dress.

A curious fact about Arundel Castle, the Duke's principal seat, is that the title of Earl of Arundel is carried with its possession. That is to say if Waldorf Astor or any other wealthy man could buy the castle, he would become ipso facto Earl of Arundel. This is a unique case among the feudal castles of England.

FRENCH POPULATION GROWING SMALLER

Falling Off in the Birth Rate a Problem Alarming to the Government.

Paris, June 13.—France is confronted with the most serious problem that ever threatened a nation. In France, alone among the nations of the world, the population is decreasing.

For many years the birth rate steadily decreased, but until 1900 there was a slow increase in the population, representing about 50,000 a year.

Now there is an actual decrease in the population.

Last week there were 20,000 more deaths than births in France. Out of a population of 41,000,000 only 750,000 children were born, or 33,000 less than in 1906. The number of births was lower than it had been for over a century.

This decline has been gathering momentum for forty years. Since 1900 the [illegible] extraordinary, and the number of births has decreased at an average [illegible] each year. Thus France is [illegible] moving toward extinction as a [illegible] power. While Germany, Austria [illegible] are increasing their population [illegible] bounds, France must fall rapidly behind them. Each year fewer young men are found to fill the ranks of the army, and the deficiency, it is estimated, will soon amount to 50,000 or 60,000, a very serious difference when France is struggling to keep level with Germany.

The French Government realizes the extremity of the situation and is trying to find a way to arrest the decline. The main cause of the decline is indirectly due to the [illegible] itself. Since the great war of 1870 the people have had to bear large and increasing taxes to carry out various wonderful schemes of improvement. The essential frugal, saving nature of the French masses, finding taxation increasing instigated a conspiracy to limit the extent of families, so as to cut down expenditure.

A committee appointed by the government to investigate the problem of depopulation discovered that married people deliberately restricted their offspring, and abandoned its work because it realized that nothing could be done.

Among the proposals put forward to encourage [illegible] proposal to relieve the father of four or more children from direct taxes. He would only contribute to the [illegible] through the indirect taxation on [illegible] and would not have to pay [illegible] on doors, windows and [illegible] which he is now burdened.

It is also proposed to give State aid to societies devoted to the protection of children in early life. Every year fifty or sixty thousand babies die through hereditary weakness or from the folly and ignorance of their parents. These lives might be saved by a more thorough system of care of the little ones.

DISMISS CAPTAIN FOR SEA DISASTER

Blamed for Wreck of Cruiser Gladiator by Court Martial.

Portsmouth, Eng., June 13.—The naval court martial which has been in session here for several days before Vice-Admiral Lowry to investigate the loss of the British cruiser Gladiator, resulting from her collision last April with the American line steamer St. Paul, after lengthy consideration found that Captain Lumsden, commander of the cruiser, had hazarded his ship by default, though not by neglect. The sentence passed upon Captain Lumsden by the court was in part as follows:

"The court having found the charge partly true and taken into consideration the difficult position in which the prisoner was placed by the steamer St. Paul in not complying with articles 15 and 19 for preventing collisions at sea, adjudges him to be reprimanded and dismissed from the ship."

Little Princesses of Greece Are Taught to Make Their Dresses

Wife of Crown Prince Places Her Children in an Old Maid School in England.

London, June 13.—Close to Brighton is the little village of Seaford where two elderly spinsters, who keep a very small but select school, are making preparations for the annual [illegible] of the Crown Princess of Greece, a sister of the Kaiser, who every Summer places her little girls in charge of the spinsters.

The Crown Princess inherits her love of England from her [illegible] mother, the late Empress Frederick, a firm believer in an English school [illegible]

The little "Greece spots," as they are known at Seaford, are not treated like royalty by their fellow pupils, and by their mother's orders are kept under strict school discipline. They are allowed very little pocket money and are taught to make their own clothes.

RHINE TO MEET DANUBE.

Munich, June 13.—Prince Louis of Bavaria, who is a trained engineer, has worked out a plan for connecting the Rhine with the Danube. The canal is to start at Munich, passing Strasburg, Uffenheim and Eberbach. At Mannheim the canal empties the waters of the Danube into the Rhine.

REPUBLICS EXPENSIVE.

Paris, June 13.—A learned statician has figured out that Republican Government of France has proved far more expensive than was the monarchical regime with its big courts.

JAPAN IS SENDING OVERFLOW TO KOREA

Natives of Island Kingdom Will Soon Dominate the Realm of the Shoguns.

London, June 13.—With the western shores of the United States and the islands of the South closed against her colonizing schemes, Japan is sending the overflow of her population to Korea and Manchuria. Japan must have some outlet for her ever-increasing population, which now amounts to over 600,000 annually.

The Far Eastern Colonization Company, capitalized at $5,000,000 handsomely subsidized by the Japanese government, promoted and financed by the leading statesmen of Japan, has for its task the problem of dealing with Japan's excess population.

Korea at present is the field for the company's operation, and judging by the line of exploitation marked out, it will be merely a matter of time until throughout Korea the Japanese will be landlords and the natives mere tenants of the soil.

Hordes of Japanese farmers and those of the lowest class are pouring into the Korean districts, particularly those under the protection of military authorities.

But the Koreans, asleep for centuries, have, with the spurs of their conquerors' heels in their necks, awakened at last and too late to a sense of nationality, and are valiantly trying to repel the invaders.

Twenty Japanese families are to be placed on land in every Korean village of less than 100 inhabitants, and along every line the Japanese promoters contemplate complete subjugation.

W. W. Astor Wins Adulation by His Gift to Hospital

Fawning Nurses Follow the Ex-American on His Rounds Through the Wards.

London, June 13.—W. W. Astor has knoted another strand in the rope that binds him to his adopted England by the generous gift of a new wing to the London Hospital for Sick Children. Mr. Astor heard that the hospital was overcrowded and that its good work was being considerably hampered thereby, so he straightway volunteered to provide a new out patients department, and his offer was accepted.

Now he is one of the lions of the Hospital for Sick Children, and his path through the wards is bestrewn with fawning nurses. His receptions in Great Ormonde street vie with the receptions accorded to royalty.

Even Princess Christian herself, that arch philanthropist where hospital work is concerned, is not greeted with a greater show of adulation than Mr. Astor. The nurses bow and scrape to him and appear to hang upon his very words when he pays his monthly visit for inspection, and the deference seems very acceptable to him, if his ineradicable smile counts for anything.

INSURE YOUR BUST!

WE INSURE your bust by legal contract; we guarantee to keep you full, plump, voluptuous and charming. If you are thin, flat, scrawny, with no hips and no bosom, hollow chested and spindle-necked, we fill up and round out the hollows and "plump out" and develop the breasts in a perfectly natural manner. Investigate this and you'll say: "It is common sense as well as scientific." We forfeit $1,000 if we can't. The humbugs who trade upon OUR 20 YEARS OF SUCCESS, who steal our printed matter, who lie about years of business, "dare not" attempt a guaranteed [illegible] development; if this is so, why be swindled by them? A Registered Lady Physician will give you FREE PERSONAL INSTRUCTIONS if you call. Dr. Conway's Bustoids restore, enlarge and develop the breasts of old and young 4 to 10 inches without injury, and they'll stay so. You can do this "quietly at home" with this Great Vitalizer and Bust Stimulant. Sealed facts 4c. stamps. CONWAY SPECIFIC CO., 178 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

People Travel Many Miles To Buy Pianos From Us

Because they can save their carfare many times over—Their local agent of some special piano cannot possibly sell at a price anywhere near as low as ours—If his piano is made by the Trust he will have to charge a Trust Price for it—and any one knows what that means—We have cut prices on pianos so low that it would be horribly extravagant to give your local dealer anywhere near his asking price for his instrument—No matter what make—The chances are that the difference between his price and ours would pay your fare to Boston and give you a good time besides—Respect your Intelligence and Purse and Buy from Us—

We give a legal guarantee.

FIRE

No commission or expense will be charged by us on the sale of pianos coming in from the fire.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

House of Best Values

Patronized by the Best People for Over a Quarter of a Century

JOHN BEHAN & CO.
65 Blackstone Street, Boston

A few reasons why we are able to give better values than many dealers. First, our long experience constitutes us good judges of liquors, which insures good quality; second, we buy only direct from best distilleries and wineries in large quantities, which secures lowest prices; third, we have no losses to make up for, through salesmen or credit sales, all our business being strictly cash; and fourth, our expenses are small in proportion to our business. Send us a trial order and be convinced.

Realizing the growing demand for a good low priced whiskey, we take pride in putting forward the two old favorites and the best sellers—for the price, we beat the world with these old-time well-known brands.

CHATS ON WHISKEY.

BY STERNE BROS.—No. 8.

It takes time to make a good whiskey. It takes years. We have a stock of Sterne's Extra Whiskey stored away in Our Warehouse that would supply our trade for some time to come. The whiskey distilled to-day does not go to our customers for years. It is put away to age and mellow. You don't get "Sterne's Extra" until it has a rich body, a fine flavor, and a quality taste.

Do you know that the ordinary low priced, low quality whiskies are made in a minute? Don't laugh—that is so. They are concocted by the hogshead overnight, to supply the demand for cheap whiskey. Now if you have a little discrimination and want a really good whiskey at a low price you should take advantage of our proposition to send you 4 full quarts of Sterne's Extra Whiskey, the regular $4 a gallon goods, for $2.85. We want Sterne's Extra to introduce us to you. It's a mighty good introduction, and one that you will never regret. Remember, 4 full honest quarts of a superior high-grade whiskey for $2.85. Its equal costs $4 at any high-class house like ours.

UNFAIR R. R. RATES PARALYZE HUB SHIPPING

Steamer Men Fear Boston Trade Will Dwindle to Rank of Galveston.

NEW YORK SUFFERS, ALSO

White Star Takes Off Three and Leyland Two From Gotham Service.

The crushing out of the shipping business of Boston by the railroads through discrimination in freight rates, which shipping men have complained of for two years, has reached the acute stage and prominent shipping men said yesterday that unless the differentials in favor of Canadian and Gulf ports are abolished our shipping business would dwindle in importance until Charlestown, S. C., and Portland, Me., would rank with Boston.

Hitherto New York has not suffered much by comparison, but the shipping interests of that city were thrown into consternation yesterday by the announcement of General Agent Jeffreys of the International Mercantile Marine Company that the great White Star freighters Cevic, Bovic and Georgic, and the Leyland liners Armenian and Victorian would be withdrawn from the New York service.

According to Mr. Jeffrys, New York is suffering from rate discrimination to a degree which makes the drastic step taken by the White Star and Leyland lines necessary. Other lines are also affected, and shippers are now wondering if the example that has been set by the two English lines will be followed by others.

Montreal Is Favored.

According to a statement made by a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce yesterday, it costs two cents a bushel more to put grain in a Boston ship than into a Montreal ship. Agent Jeffrys added that the Canadian port could get grain into its ships 2 ½ cents cheaper than New York. If these figures are correct, New York is at a greater disadvantage than Boston, but up to date Boston has suffered most in the matter, as shown by the withdrawal of ships.

There is not a line of Transatlantic steamships in Boston that has not found it necessary to curtail the number of its scheduled sailings this year. The Leyland line, which for years has been the greatest freight company engaged in the Boston trade, operating three lines, one with weekly freight and passenger boats to Liverpool, one with weekly boats to Manchester and one with fortnightly boats to London, has suffered most.

Nearly two years ago this line was obliged to sell two big 15,000 ton ships because of trouble with the railroads. Last fall the line decided again to try to increase its Boston business and put on vessels to carry all classes of passengers, and had even made all the arrangements for so doing when they began to find that their business was behind diverted to Montreal. At present half its immense fleet is lying idle in English ports and the managers seriously consider withdrawing from Boston and using all its ships in the Gulf trade, endeavoring to build up a big trade with New Orleans and Galveston.

Sylvania Laid Up.

W. H. Harrison, the assistant manager of the line, was in Boston last week to look the ground over. He will return to England this month to report to the directors, and upon his report rests the future service in Boston.

The Cunard line has laid up its freighter Sylvania, which has been making monthly trips to Boston for years.

The Warren line, which operates four large ships, and which is considered one of the institutions of Boston, so long and uninterruptedly has the line operated here, has laid up all four of its ships and will not resume until the managers of the line can see their way clearer than at present.

The Holland-Boston line has suspended its sailings from Rotterdam to Boston and is using the four ships formerly in this service elsewhere. The Scandanavian-American line has curtailed the number of sailings materially. All the other lines have suffered more or less, according upon how dependent they were on Western freight.

NEGRO CUTS PASTOR; RACE RIOTS FEARED

Stabber Shot by Minister's Son; Landed in Jail After Lynching Threats.

Huntingdon, Tenn., June 13.—Because Rev. J. Jhnson, pastor of the United Brethern Church, expostulated with Lewis Taylor, a negro, who had pushed the minister's son into the street, he was fatally stabbed to-day and grave race riots are expected to result.

When Taylor stabbed his father, young Johnson procured a pistol and shot the negro who was afterward arrested. Then the negro's friends got arms and threatened to lynch the boy, but the whites rallied to the marshal's aid and Taylor was landed in jail.

Mayor Gets String of 25 Fish. Caught 'em Himself? Certainly Sunburned and Relieved of His Cold by Few Days Sport About Sebago.

Sunburned, relieved of his cold, and proudly displaying a string of pickerel and bass that totalled twenty-five, Mayor Hibbard alighted from the early afternoon Portland express yesterday and took lunch at the Hotel Bellevue.

After lunch he departed for his home in Dorchester. He neither looked in upon City Hall nor went to the South Station to see the Republican delegation off to Chicago.

The Mayor had spent an enjoyable few days at Long Pond, near Sebago, Me. While away he neither saw a Boston newspaper nor heard from things official or political in Boston. The first knowledge he had of the fate of the Merger bill was gleaned from a Portland evening newspaper Friday night.

"I had a bully good time and will be at City Hall Monady morning," said the Mayor. "No, I won't say anything at all about the merger or the Legislature."

Informed of the suggestion of the committee on ordinances that a single head be appointed to the bath commission, the Mayor announced that he disapproved of such an idea and would so inform the sub-committee on ordinances Monday.

"I don't believe either in transferring the powers of the bath commissioners to the Board of Health. I favor a commission of three for baths instead of the present commission of seven."

CLASS DAY TICKETS AT A BIG PREMIUM

Week of Harvard Fetes Begins To-day With Annual Baccalaureate Sermon.

HUNDREDS OF SPREADS

Class Dinner Monday Night, Class Day Friday and Commencement the 24th.

Harvard class day week will begin this afternoon with the baccalaureate sermon, delivered by Dean W. W. Fenn of the Harvard Divinity School. The class dinner comes Monday night and class day on Friday, as usual.

The senior class will gather in front of Holworthy hall, the senior dormitory, and march in a body to Appleton chapel to-day, where they will listen to the address by Rev. Dr. Fenn, which will close their college career.

To-morrow night will be graduates' night at the Pops, in Symphony Hall, where all the classes will assemble. Each class has its portion of the hall reserved.

Tuesday night there will be a great mass meeting in the yard to rehearse the songs and cheering for the Yale game, which takes place on Thursday.

Joint Concert Wednesday.

Wednesday the second joint concert of the Glee and Musical Clubs will be given in Sanders Theatre. This was an innovation of last year. Thursday the annual Harvard and Yale game is held in Soldiers Field, when the Crimson and Blue cross bats in the most important baseball game of the college year. The outlook this year was for a time quite dubious, but Harvard seems to have taken a brace in the last few games. The undergraduates will assemble in the yard and march through it to the Stadium on the day of the game.

Crowds are pouring in from distant places to participate in the festivities, and the seniors are hustling to get in readiness to welcome their relatives and friends.

On Friday the class day exercises will begin at 10 o'clock. The classes will assemble in the yard and then cheer each building with the seniors for the last time. The parade will be headed by the officers of the Senior class. Following the parade, the exercises will be held in the Stadium, where the renowned Ivy Day oration will be given. Confetti and streamers will be thrown on the heads of the graduates, undergraduates and spectators.

Hundreds of Spreads.

In the evening the hundreds of spreads will be given in the various dormitories and college buildings. There will be the three college spreads—in Memorial Hall, the Hemenway Gymnasium and the Harvard Union. After the feasting has concluded, the halls will be cleared and dancing will continue until early the next morning. As usual, the delta of Memorial Hall will be a mecca for the young people between the dances. Only members of the Harvard Union will have access to the club house after 4 o'clock.

Tickets this year to the yard are to be limited in number, as graduates are entitled to only five tickets each, while undergraduates will also receive five and seniors ten. The price of the tickets for the yard this year is thirty-five cents over the price four years ago. The authorities say the object of the increase is to keep out the undesirable element, who in the past have committed acts of vandalism and rowdyism. This year no return tickets will be given out after 8 o'clock, save upon payment of twenty-five cents.

The Hasty Pudding, Beck Hall, Pi Eta, Delta Upsilon and other select spreads will be given in the clubhouse or on the lawn. Admission to these spreads can only be had by the immediate friends of the members.

Hay Heads Hasty Pudding.

The Hasty Pudding spread will be under the direction of C. L. Hay, who is the president of the club and the son of the late Secretary of State. The Beck Hall spread will be under the supervision of Captain Crosby and his bride, Mrs. Crosby, nee Miss Elizabeth Coolidge. The Harvard Union spread will be on the lawn, and members and their friends will be invited.

The class day officers are:

First marshal, George Gill Ball, who rowed on last year's four oared crew; second marshal, John Richardson, Jr., captain of the varsity crew now at New London, training for the Harvard-Yale boat race; third marshal, Gordon Goldwin Glass, of Spokane, Washington, who rowed on last year's crew and was taken sick just before the Yale contest; secretary, Guy Emerson, manager of the track team; treasurer, Carlton Apollonio, who did such efficient work on the varsity football team; orator, Henry R. Shepherd, a Phi Beta Kappa man; ivy orator, Kenneth Greeley Carpenter, an editor of the Harvard Lampoon and Crimson; odist, Joseph Viegler Husband, and editor of the Advocate, Lampoon and Crimson; chorister, LeRoy J. Snyder, who is leader of the Harvard Glee Club; poet, John Hall Wheelock, who is president of the Harvard Monthly; class committee, Morton Lewis Newhall, the clever football quarterback; Harold B. Amberg, the oarsman and basketball player.

Commencement June 24.

The committee in charge of the day consists of James Scollay Whitney, business manager of the Crimson; John W. Wendell, who did such effective work on the football team; Dwight S. Brigham, president of the Crimson and manager of the baseball team; Hugh M. Gilmore, president during his junior year; Charles R. Leonard, the third baseman and captain of the baseball team; Laurence O. Dodge, captain of the track team, and Henderson Inches, a football player.

Marcus B. Whitney, John B. March and Hayden Channing comprise the photograph committee.

Commencement takes place on Wednesday, June 24, and the class of 1883 will have charge of the day, as it is the twenty-fifth anniversary of their graduation.

GIRLS' STRIKE MAY TIE UP CIGAR MEN

Springfield, June 13.—More than 100 girls employed as tobacco strippers in the cigar manufacturies here will go out on strike Tuesday unless they are given one cent a pound increase in wages. In case of a strike it will mean the temporary suspension of the cigar manufacturing industry in this city. The strippers organized a union six years ago which now has 110 members. They are being paid six cents a pound for Havana stripping and four cents for domestic tobacco.

This gives them a weekly wage of from $7.50 to $10.50. They want the manufacturers to give them seven cents a pound for Havana stripping. The manufacturers thus far have refused.

LOUISE DRESSER GETS DIVORCE FROM ACTOR

Stage Favorite Given Right to Resume Maiden Name.

New York, June 13.—A final decree of divorce was granted by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum in favor of Louise Dresser, actress, against John Knauff, who is known on the stage as Jack Norworth, a singer. At the request of her lawyer, William Kean, Mrs. Knauff was allowed by the decree to resume her maiden name of Dresser.

Desert Sun-Worshippers? My Daughter Loyal, Says Priestess

Miss Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of high priestess of Sun Worshippers, who was reported to have forsaken cult. Her mother, Mrs. Hilton, declares she is still a Mazdaznan

Mrs. Hilton, Head of Mazdaznans, Prepares for Convention of Faithful at Lowell Temple.

Lowell, June 13.—Coincident with the announcement that the Mazdaznans, or Sun Worshippers, of this country will hold a convention in the Lowell Temple of Mazdaznanism the last of July comes a specific statement from Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Ruth Hilton of this city, the Eastern high priestess of the cult, that her daughter, Miss Ruth Mildred Brubaker, is a firm adherent of Mazdaznanism, despite reports to the contrary.

Miss Brubaker is Mrs. Hilton's beautiful daughter by a former marriage. It was said here that she had left the Mazdaznan fold despite the pleadings of her prophetess mother, and that she was seeking some other church and religion.

This reported disruption, right in the home of the high priestess, caused much interest here. The strong character of Mrs. Hilton is well understood. It was argued that Miss Brubaker would not be allowed to leave the Mazdaznan fold without stiff objection from Mrs. Hilton both on account of the immediate loss to the Mazdaznan church and the blow to the Hilton prestige among the followers of the cult.

Convention Opens July 28.

Mrs. Hilton said yesterday:

"There is not the slightest truth in the report that Miss Brubaker, my daughter, had left the church. She is an earnest worker in and exponent of the Mazdaznan science."

The Mazdaznan convention begins July 28 and is to last eight days. Mazdaznans will be here from Boston, New York, Worcester, Chicago and Montreal, Can. Chicago is expected to send a good-sized delegation because that city is the present headquarters of the faith in this country and the home of the leader, Dr. Ottoman Hanish of India, who will preside at most of the convention sessions.

Announcement that the sessions would not be public created comment that the Mazdaznans were afraid to have the public come in. To this Mrs. Hilton says:

Why Public is Barred.

"There is nothing private about it. While we do not seek adherents, we will do our work as teachers. The coming convention will be attended by many delegates. Space in our temple here is limited. So the public will not be admitted to any of our sessions."

The statement that space is limited is quite true. The temple room is located in part of the barn on the Hilton estate, refitted for purposes of Mazdaznan study, lecturing and worship. It is a medium-sized apartment in which from 100 to 150 people might be comfortably seated.

BANDITS ESCAPE IN TOURING CAR

Autoist Presses Revolver Against Victim's Nose as Woman Robs Him.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 13.—Two men and a woman in an automobile near the Dunwoodie Golf Links, between Mount Vernon and Yonkers, early to-day turned highway robbers and left the wayfarer, who was their victim, lying unconscious across the Yonkers avenue trolley tracks. William Kudel, a business man of New Haven, was the object of this novel crime. So violent was the attack upon him that he did not regain consciousness until this evening, and his story sent the Yonkers police on a hot hunt for the bandits in the touring car.

While asking several questions the chauffeur of the automobile approached Kudel. Before the latter could divine the chauffeur's intention the latter had placed the muzzle of a revolver at Kudel's nose.

"Not a word out of you or I will blow your head off," he said.

Out of the automobile jumped a second man and a woman. The second man got behind him, while the woman went through all of his pockets. She took his watch and $24. Then she reached over and detached his diamond scarf pin.

FALLS DOWN STAIRS; BREAKS HIS SKULL

As William Goldsmith was going downstairs in his home at No. 123 Belmont street, Cambridge, shortly after 11 o'clock last night, he stumbled and fell. He was picked up unconscious with a fractured skull, collarbone and wrist. He is in the Cambridge Relief Hospital and on the dangerous list. He is sixty-five years old.

SENATOR BAILEY'S CONDITION CRITICAL

New York, June 13.—Senator Joseph W. Bailey, of Texas, who has been ill at the Waldorf-Astoria for several days, following an operation on his throat, to-night was a little worse, it was said. He has a high intermittent fever, although no alarm is felt at present.

BROWN TAIL MOTHS ATTACK POLICEMEN

Make Life Miserable for the City Sleuths and Passing Throngs on Streets.

Brown tail moths made life miserable last night for the thousands of pedestrians who thronged Tremont and Boylston streets and Huntington avenue. The insects fairly filled the air.

At the Lagrange street police station the officers were almost distracted by the moths. How they got into the station is not known, but there they were and in overpowering numbers. They fluttered around the policemen, and their fuzz, dropping on the officers on duty, caused the men the greatest discomfort.

The continued hot weather is blamed by the knowing ones for this unwonted plague of the browntails. Doctors were kept busy last night writing prescriptions for ointments to give relief from the irritation caused by the pest.

BOSTON'S DEATH ROLL FOR THE WEEK 206

84 of These Reported From Public Institutions.

Boston's death roll for last week was 206, and of this number the unusually large proportion of 84 died in public institutions. Tuberculosis claimed the largest number of deaths from a single cause, 15, while 35 new cases of the "white plague" were reported to the health authorities. During the week there were two deaths from cerebro spinal meningitis and three new cases.

HORSE MAIMS ARTIST.

Burlington, N. J., June 13.—Professor W. B. D. Travis, artist and author and a famous Civil War correspondent, was the victim of a horrible accident at his residence in the suburbs, when a favorite horse attacked him, and, fastening its teeth upon the lower part of his face, tore away the lip and flesh from the chin. The animal, which suddenly became ferocious, was an old favorite with the artist and had been one of his equine models.

AT LAST! LODGERS GET CHANCE TO KICK

Mrs. Boarding House Keeper Be Careful! Commission Starts in Work.

ASK FOR SUGGESTIONS

80,000 Dyspeptic Bostonians Threaten to Deluge New Board with Gentle Hints.

If you need some extra towels or the water isn't hot;
If the roomer just above you throws his big boots on the floor;
If you find the busy bellboy is too Johnny-on-the-spot,
Then you needn't suffer silent on these subjects any more.
If you think your rent is awful and the other lodgers worse;
If your lodging house conditions make you sour, sick and sore,
There is balm in Gilead waiting to take off the horrid curse—
For the Lodging House Commission will now hearken to your roar.
—Lilts of the Lodgers.

* * *

The long-suffering Boston lodger and the patient landlady are to have a grand chance soon to uncork the vials of their wrath and "make a holler."

The Boston Lodging House Commission, recently created by Mayor George A. Hibbard, with offices at No. 30 Tremont street, is preparing to give hearings and is looking for suggestions on the lodging house question.

Chance for 80,000 to Kick.

There are about 80,000 lodgers in Greater Boston, comprising all the regular varieties of lodgers and sundry kinds that can't be classified.

There is a proper proportion of landladies who have charge of the homes of these lodgers. And the landladies range, of course, from the philanthropic and considerate ones to those who think that one towel a week and no gas after 9 o'clock at night are good enough for anybody.

The commission will arrange for hearings but, as Secretary Alexander I. Peckham of the commission says, if anyone wants to write to the commission about any lodging house subject, with a view to speaking on it, the commission will fix a date for hearing.

So, if you have a grievance regarding lodging houses or landladies, now is your time. Some grievances may be deep enough, but may not be available for the commission's purpose. If your landlady persists in listening at your door, or peeking through your letters or searching the pockets of your Sunday suit while you are trying to earn rent money, the commission can't be expected to pass resolutions against the landlady.

What Commission Decides.

And, if the lodgers will come home with a "bun on," as they say, and go to bed with their boots on, or if the wife of Mr. Jones on the second floor front can't agree with Mrs. Smith on the third floor front side room, the commission will hardly offer to arbitrate for the landlady.

But there are a lot of general questions affecting the whole lodging house situation that a clever commission can offer pertinent suggestions upon. To quote Secretary Peckham:

"We have decided on a campaign of education. We will investigate the question of sanitation thoroughly. We have no absolute power in the matter, but we can make recommendations for better living conditions.

"Another feature of the problem is the question of protection of life and limb to the lodger and security from sneak thieves and fire.

"A third question is—is it advisable that licenses be issued for lodging houses, based on the sanitary conditions. There is the question of licenses based on the moral conditions of the establishment, but we shall not take that up.

Sales Big "Straw" Lodgers.

"Then there is the registration of lodgers and the matter of the sale of lodging houses by means of so-called 'straw' lodgers who are installed in the house for the time being to make business look good to the purchaser, but who disappear the moment the sale is closed.

"The setting aside of a room in a lodging house for a public parlor will be considered by the commission. Some may favor it. But the landladies may oppose it on the ground of extra expense."

The commission is composed of Chairman Joseph Lee, Secretary Peckham, Isaac Heller, Miss Maude M. Rockwell and Miss Josephine Bleakie.

The commission realizes, of course, that general regulations will be difficult on account of the widely varying character of the different lodging houses. Rules which are needed for some tenement district lodgings will not be necessary in the Back Bay.

On the other hand, Back Bay lodgers who demand a grand piano, a well selected library of Ibsen, Browning and the classic poets, may not sympathize with a wish of the tenement house lodger to sit on the front stoop on Summer evenings.

But the offer of the commission to hearken to any suggestions or complaints promises to let loose a pleasing assortment of suggestions.

ATHLETES TURNED DOWN BY SCHOOL

Springfield, June 13.—Principals William Orr of the Central High School and Charles F. Warner of the Technical High School have no intention of letting athletics interfere with studies, and for this reason have turned down all six of the nominees for managers of the different athletic teams. In the past one or more candidates have been refused the sanction of the faculties, but never before have all six been turned down.

The Springfield High School Athletic Association is doing some great hustling to provide other candidates before the annual meeting on Friday. It is necessary for each candidate for office to have the signature of twenty-five members on his nomination papers. After this must come the approval of the two principals before the names can be placed before the association to be voted upon. The six students who have been turned down are among the most popular young men in the two schools, and are well adapted for managerial duties.

NEW BALLOON SAILS 9 MILES IN 5 HOURS

"Sky Pilot" Christened; Lands in Woods With Aeronauts.

Pittsfield, June 13.—The new balloon Sky Pilot landed at 4 o'clock this afternoon after being in the air five hours and traveling nine miles. The landing was made in a dense patch of woods near Hinsdale, and was five more hours before the party could find their way out.

The Sky Pilot was christened at Aero Park shortly before it sailed in an effort to reach Boston. Mrs. Luke J. Minahan, wife of the president of the Aero Club, was sponsor. Before the airship rose Mrs. Minahan broke a bottle of champagne over the anchor and exclaimed: "I christen thee Sky Pilot."

Several thousand people witnessed the ascension. In the basket were the owner of the balloon, Alphonse J. Morgan and J. L. Wade, Jr., of Cleveland, with Leo Stevens acting as pilot.

Late to-night the party arrived in Pittsfield almost exhausted from the long tramp in the woods. At the Hotel Wendell Mr. Stevens announced that he would try to reach Boston again Friday, when Mr. Godden's new balloon, the "Boston," is christened.

New Haven, Ct., June 13.—Charles Hamilton, in an airship owned by the New York promoter, Strobel, sailed over the town for two hours to-day. Starting from Savin Rock, he startled the crowds at the Yale-Princeton game, and then circled his ship around the City Hall for half an hour.

On starting back to Savin Rock the steering gear got out of order, and he grazed the railway station and finally struck ground in the switch yards.

A crowd helped him repair his gear, and he again sailed skyward in the teeth of a sharp southerly wind. This test proved too great, and little by little he was driven out to sea.

Before he was carried too far from shore he let his ship fall on a mud flat in a few feet of water. A tug came to his relief and pulled the airship out of the water.

"OLD GLORY" 131 YEARS OLD TODAY

United States Flag Flies on Birth Date Across Width of Continent.

To-day is Flag Day.

Just one hundred and thirty-one years ago, the United States flag was adopted by the United States Congress.

It was ordered that there should be thirteen white stars, one for each State in the Union, placed on the field of blue.

To-day, just one hundred and thirty-one years later, there are forty-eight stars on the blue field and there are forty-eight States and two territories.

When the resolution was adopted on that first flag day, June 14, 1777, General George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Harrison and Lynch met and designed the emblem. Gerge Washington, himself, drew the plans and made the sketch for the first American flag.

Then Betsey Ross, a patriotic and public-spirited resident of Philadelphia, was chosen by General Washington to make the flag. She consulted with General Washington, offered some suggestions, which the General accepted, and the flag was hoisted in Philadelphia.

The needle work of Betsey Ross pleased General Washington so much that she was given the contract to make all the flags for the United States government as long as she lived. Her descendants continued the task.

To-day "Old Glory" will fly to the breeze from Canada to Mexico and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

HONOR IRISH BARDS AT BIG CENTENNIAL

Balfe and Moore Songs to Be Sung at South Boston Concert Tuesday Night.

With a rendition of the songs written by Thomas Moore and Michael William Balfe, the centennial celebration in honor of those famous composers of Irish melodies, to be held on Tuesday evening in St. Augustine's Hall, E street, South Boston, will bring together a large gathering of Irish-Americans. The affair is to be under the personal direction of William Ludwig, the Irish baritone.

The programme arranged is considered an exceptional one, and will set forth the works of Moore and Balfe in an unusual and attractive manner. A chorus composed of members of the Dublin and St. Brendan choral societies, conducted by Charles T. Forrester, will assist, as will the Balfe quartet in Gaelic and other numbers. This quartet was organized for the first St. Brendan concert by Mr. Forrester, and was the first body in Boston to render concert numbers in the Irish tongue.

Miss Josephine Moore Suter, Miss Lucy Phillips, Miss A. Harriet Haley and Joseph J. Mikalojewski will also assist.

Mr. Ludwig long occupied a first rank in his class on the operatic stage, and is the only member of his profession to devote time to the singing of the ballads and patriotic songs of Ireland, and this, moreover, at a time when they were most unpopular and when the present movement for the preservation and development of Irish music was not contemplated.

The Ludwig-Balfe concert in South Boston therefore affords its appeal as a tribute to the man, as well as the music of Erin, to which he has rendered important service. Mr. Ludwig hails from the city of Dublin, Ireland, and has always been an ardent advocate for anything which would have a tendency to benefit the old land.

Members of the Dublin Association will act as ushers at the concert. Many of the other Irish County clubs will be represented.

5,000 See Diver Killed in "Slide for Life" on Wire

Acrobat Takes Fatal Plunge, as Strap Breaks, Before Eyes of Wife and Children.

Bergen Beach, L. I., June 13.—Five thousand persons saw Joseph Jakob, a profession diver, get killed here to-day in his "slide for life."

Jakob to-day started on a glide on a wire from the top of a 100-foot pole to a spile in the water. He had slid not more than thirty feet before the eyes of his wife and two children, who were in the crowd, when a strap holding him to the wire broke.

The diver's body whirling in air shot toward the water, where he struck on his stomach. His wife's scream as she saw him emerge and float face upward first told the crowd that a tragedy had been enacted.

Jakob was still alive but unconscious when taken from the water, and died three hours afterward in the Kings County Hospital. He was twenty-eight years old and had performed diving feats in many cities throughout the country.

ATHETIC PLEA OF CHILD WINS 'PAPA'

Man Long Estranged From Home Now Seeks Address of Little "Toodles."

ASKED GOD TO BLESS HIM

Sunday American Tracer Bureau Eager for News of Other Missing Persons.

NOTICE—"TOODLES," Fall River. For news of "Papa," send me your own name and address right away.
Tracer of Lost Persons,
Boston American.

The Tracer of Lost Persons at the office of the Boston American wants to hear immediately from "Toodles" of Fall River.

For "Papa" is found, and if "Toodles" will send her right name and address to the Tracer of Lost Persons, then her father can learn where she is and can find her.

The Tracer of Lost Persons, who has helped to find many a grown-up and many a dear child, for anxious friends or relatives, has received many a pitiful letter, asking for assistance.

But few, possibly none, were so pathetic as the sorrowful little message written from a little girl, signed simply "Toodles" and mailed from Fall River.

The letter was received at the Boston American office during the week of March 1, 1908, and was published the Sunday following, March 8, as follows:

Asks God to Bless Papa.

"Dear Papa—Will you write to your little 'toodles'? You used to love me so much. I have had the scarlet fever since you went away. Papa, I cried for you all the time. We have no home now. Papa, if you could see my poor mama cry you would forgive her and write, I know. I have no shoes to my feet.

"Every night when I say my prayers, I ask God to bless my papa and send him home to us. It is my own papa I want and he will know who I am, because he bought me a ring on my birthday when I was five years old on April 2. Mama sent him two postcards from Woonsocket.

"He will know me. O papa, don't you remember mamma left a little dress and my toy bank on your trunk when you parted four years ago. Papa, my darling papa, when mama is working I get many a good licking. I am the picture of you. With papa and mama parted, I am all alone and broken hearted and that's why they call me nobody's little girl.

Mamma Cries All the Time.

"Papa, mamma cries all the time for you. I always put my arms around her neck and say: 'Don't cry, mamma, papa will come home some day.'

"I go to school now. Won't you write to 'Toodles?' And, O papa, please send me a pair of shoes. I think poor mamma is going to die. So the doctor says. Fifty kisses for you. May God bless my papa. —Toodles."

That was all the letter, but such a pitiful little childish prayer for "papa."

Well, now "Papa" is found. His attention was called to the letter from "Toodles." And "Papa" wants "Toodles" to send her address to the Tracer of Lost Persons at the Boston American office, so he can find where she is.

If "Toodles" sees this, or if "Toodles' " mamma sees it, or any of "Toodles' " friends, let them send word right away. Address Tracer of Lost Persons, Boston American, No. 82 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

GIRL TELLS OWN STORY OF WRONGS

Jennie Ramirez for First Time Explains Why She Stabbed Fellow Countryman.

SAYS HE TAUNTED HER

Declares He Persisted in Forcing Indignities Upon Her.

Her pitiful story—how she, an educated Italian girl, came from her faraway home to this country, her parents having died; how she proved attractive to John D'Angelo; how he attempted to secure her friendship, how she was made to hate the man and how, after months of brooding, she finally slashed him to the bone across his face and arms—Jennie Ramirez, eighteen years of age, to-day for the first time reveals.

She tells her own story of her alleged wrongs and of how she took the law into her own hands. She is under bail to appear in the South Boston District Court before Judge Fallon to answer a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

By Jennie Ramirez.

I came to this country three and one half years ago. I went to live with my sister-in-law at No. 251 Gold Street, South Boston.

There John D'Angelo came one day not long after I had arrived in what was to me a strange land with strange ways. My sister-in-law introduced us, saying: "This is my brother-in-law."

He came often after that. One day when he came I was alone in the house. He acted so that I have hated him ever since.

I've no sympathy for him. I didn't intend to kill him. He deserved what I gave him and I shouldn't suffer for what I did.

Soon after I came here my sister-in-law, with whom I was making my home, moved to No. 213 Gold street. I went with her, of course. I had no where else to go. They treated me kindly.

It was there that D'Angelo followed me. He told me he loved me not long after I first met him. I reminded him that he was a married man and the father of innocent little children who looked up to him. He persisted in telling me of his love and devotion to me.

Then I spurned him. Then he acted toward me in a manner so that I have hated and loathed him ever since.

After this he said to me: "I'll kill you if you tell anyone." I was afraid of him and I told my sister-in-law everything. She talked with D'Angelo and he told her that he meant no harm. He told her he loved me even if he was married.

He was warned to keep away from me, and I told him myself I would tell my brother about him and the way he had acted to me when I was but a stranger in this country if he did not cease bothering me.

About this time I was taken sick. My lungs were affected and I went to Rockland, Mass., for treatment. I stayed there for four months and then had to come back here before I was well because one of my sister-in-law's little girls fell out of a window and was hurt.

GLAD SHE SLASHED MAN WHO TAUNTED AND ANNOYED HER

JENNIE RAMIREZ.

This man began to come again. When I refused to have anything to do with him he insulted me and taunted me. When I passed him on the street, even if he was with other men he would call out to me and taunt me.

I brooded over it and determined not to submit to this any more. I got the razor and carried it with me to use it on him if he came near me or if he insulted me.

Last Thursday night I went out to find my little nephew. This man saw me. He was with some others. He taunted me. I was furious. I drew the razor. The others fled and I slashed his face and cut him. I'm not sorry, for I only did what he deserved. I do feel sorry for his children—that is all.

MORE ACTIVITY IN LOWELL MILLS

Lowell, June 13.—Lowell mills report increased activity in the market, and while a full time schedule cannot go into effect at this time, the agents are very optimistic and agree that the textile manufacturing has passed its dullest period. The Hamilton Print Works to-day announced plans to resume on full time June 22, which will mean work for 500.

"DREAM GIRL" TO MARRY.

East St. Louis, Ill., June 13.—Miss Lida Bridges, "dream girl," who slept four days last Fall and returned to consciousness with a vivid description of heaven, will soon marry Raleigh Taylor, a young railroad man of this city, who sat by her side during the time she was in a comatose state.

STEALS $50,000 WORTH OF TICKETS

South Bend., Ind., June 13.—I. A. Gaver, aged twenty-eight years, arrested on a burglary, has confessed to robbing railway exchanges in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Maine and California of tickets worth $50,000, which, based on an average rate of 3½ cents a mile, would take him around the world eighty times. A reward of $10,000 was offered for Gaver's arrest.

F. C. Donald, treasurer and chairman of the Railway Ticket Protective Bureau, arrived to take Gaver to Kenton, O., where he will be tried for robbing the station at Dunkirk, O.

SONG WON BRIDE; COULDN'T KEEP HER

Chicago, June 13.—Miss Pearl McKenna, student in the Chicago Musical College, fell in love with the song, "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie," back in 1901.

A few months later she fell in love with its composer, Robert J. Adams, and married him March 15, though her mother opposed. Mrs. Adams yesterday admitted that her husband's ability to love was not measured by his power to write about it. She asked a divorce, naming "Edith" and "Mabel" and others. Mrs. Adams was heiress to $250,000. Her mother lives at No. 2,524 Michigan avenue.

Summer Is Short Story Time

THE July number of COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE is a short story magazine—besides being all the other kinds that a great general magazine should be. Among the unusual stories which dot this splendid number are:

"The Wonders of the Deep"
By Gertrude Pahlow
How SHE was supposed to be scientifically interested in fish. How HE accordingly talked fish morning, noon and night, until he was told that "An over-elaborated fish course may spoil a very good dinner." Whereupon all his troubles were over.

"Filippo"
By Raymond MacDonald Alden
A colorful story of California and of the doctor who once played Providence down in the coast country, between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"The Sin Buyer"
By Bruno Lessing
Young Yankel needed a thousand dollars on which to get married—and got it, in a very curious way known only to his people. One of Lessing's most achingly funny stories.

"The Hand of Life"
By Lucia Chamberlain
Should a life which seems of great value to the world be sacrificed to one of no apparent worth? A tense, moving story of artist life in New York.

"Why I Wrote Sally Ann's Experience"
By Eliza Calvert Hall
On the tenth anniversary of the first publication of this remarkable short story in COSMOPOLITAN (reprinted in full in this issue) the author tells how and why she came to write it. This is the story which President Roosevelt recently recommended "as a tract in all families where the men folks tend to selfish or thoughtless or overbearing disregard of the rights of their womenkind."

All these and more like them make memorable this
